Gain Foothold on New Guinea Coast Nearer Port Moresby; Pay Heavy Price.

By The Associated Press

GENERAL MacARTHUR'S HEADQUARTERS, AUSTRALIA, July 23—The Japanese, in the first aggressive thrust toward Australia since their smashing Coral Sea defeat, have gained a new foothold on the southeast New Guinea coast 100 miles across from the vital American and Australian garrisoned allied outpost of Port Moresby.

Under a terrific bombing and strafing assault from allied planes the enemy put ashore a force of between 1,500 and 2,500 troops Wednesday at Gona Mission, near Buna on the Papuan peninsula coast and 150 miles southeast of Japanese-held Salamaua.

No Allied Forces

General MacArthur's headquarters announced that this landing in an area where there are no allied forces, cost the Japanese heavily in casualties, a large transport and a landing barge sunk and a seaplane shot down. The Allies lost two fighters.

Allied airmen first spotted the small, southbound Japanese convoy picking its way along the island-dotted New Guinea coast just before dark Tuesday. They attacked immediately, scoring hits on the transport which later sank, and resumed the assault when the invaders started going ashore early Wednesday.

This first invasion of the Papuan peninsula was considered a greater threat to Port Moresby in that it put the invader closer to the allied base, but to get there overland he will find the going hard.

Facing the Japanese is the Owen Stanley range, rising above 13,000 feet and the peninsula has some of the world's most inaccessible territory. There is no vehicular road between Port Moresby and Buna but only a few trails.

Port Moresby is garrisoned by Americans, including fliers and recently-arrived Negro ground forces, and some of Australia's hardest and toughest fighters.

If the Japanese strike across Papua at Port Moresby it will be to erase an obstacle to invasion preparation above the Torres Strait, narrow waterway between New Guinea and Cape York, Australia's northern-most extremity.

The occupation of Gona mission was the first Japanese occupation of any southwest Pacific territory since March 10 when they seized Finschafen, 60 miles north of Lae.

NAZI SUB CREWMEN BURIED WITH HONORS

Navy Tells of Twilight Services Held for 29.

By The Associated Press

Burial with full military honors of 29 crewmen of a German submarine sunk by a destroyer on Atlantic patrol has been announced by the navy as The Associated Press unofficial count of allied and neutral ship losses by submarine in the western Atlantic rose to 396.

Twilight requiem services, a salute of three volleys by a navy firing squad and the sounding of "taps" marked the commitment at the national cemetery at Hampton, Va., of the first enemy dead to be buried on American shores in this war.

The navy declined to give further details of the sinking of the U-boat, as it announced the recent destruction of three more merchantmen declared the captain of one was machine-gunned because he refused to give the submarine commander the name of the Norwegian merchantman.

The captain, Captain Finn Ager Mikkelsen, 43, of Tonaburg, Norway, was hit in the arm.

The other two vessels announced as having been sunk were an American and a British [illegible]

COURTHOUSE TO GET ATTENTION

Flagstones, Big Steps May Go; Trees To Be Trimmed To Eliminate Birds.

Action on courthouse cleanup recommendations made in May by the Marion County Academy of Medicine has started, but it may take a year or two to carry the program through.

That was the announcement at noon today following a morning meeting of the Marion county commissioners.

The commissioners, through Prosecuting Attorney James E. Reed, said they have asked John Probst of the Probst Supply Co. to survey the possibility of eliminating the outside men's toilet and making proper accommodation for a men's rest room inside the courthouse. This will mean a remodeling of the women's rest rooms, it was indicated.

To Remove Stones

Later this summer or early in the fall the commissioners plan to remove the flagstones on the courthouse esplanade and landscape the grounds.

With removal of the flagstones, the commissioners also will trim back the trees on the esplanade so the trees will not provide cover for birds.

The commissioners said they have several plans under consideration for removing the steps on the south and west sides of the courthouse and replacing them with neat, modern type stairs such as those at the west entrance to the post office.

Prosecutor Reed said that the entire program is contingent on allocation of revenue to the commissioners, but that there was a feeling of certainty that the program could be carried through in a year or two.

Doctors' Program

The Academy of Medicine recommendations the five-point program was as follows:

Remove the trees; remove the flagstones on the esplanade and landscape the uncovered ground; clean the exterior of the building; remove the south steps and render the courthouse toilets more hygenic, conveniently arranged and modernized.

Farley Urges President's Choice To Leave Race

By The Associated Press

ALBANY, N. Y., July 23—The royal political battle for New York's democratic gubernatorial nomination, which threatens to become a test of power between President Roosevelt and State Chairman James A. Farley, broke wide open today with Farley's declaration that U. S. Senator James M. Mead would "make a terrible governor."

Any doubts that Farley would vigorously oppose Mead was dispelled last night when he predicted "sure disaster" for Mead's candidacy and urged him to withdraw. The state chairman is backing Attorney General John J. Bennett Jr., who already claims more than a majority of convention pledges.

STRIKE HALTS WORK AT GALION FACTORY

Special to The Star

GALION, O., July 23—Production employes at the North Electric Mfg. Co. here went on strike at 6 a. m. today, stopping work on government contracts for communications materials.

It is believed that approximately 900 workers are in the group although neither the company officials nor officials of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, Local 2B273, A. F. of L. affiliate, would make a statement.

Delay Charged

F. J. Santschi, Washington representativ eof the I. B. of E. W., who came here several days ago to begin negotiations with company officials, said the workers are dissatisfied with the company's delayed action on the union's request for a contract covering hours, wages and working condition. He said the employes are "on their own" since the company has refused the union's offers and has made none of its own.

This morning's strike followed a union meeting last night. Three production men refused to let any workers into the plant.

W. H. Wilson, labor organizor of the brotherhood, indicated this morning that the problem now will be referred to the department of labor.

On June 30 an election was conducted among the production workers under the direction of Hugh Sperry of Cleveland, regional director for the Eighth district of the national labor relations board, to decide whether they wanted the brotherhood as a bargaining agent.

Results of Vote

Eight hundred and sixty-six workers were eligible to vote. Valid votes were cast by 837 workers. A total of 488 votes were cast, but five were challenged, one was void and there were 344 blank. Of the total votes cast 488 were cast for the [illegible]

Morgenthau Asks Another Big Increase in Tax Bill

Secretary Appeals to Senate Committee To Boost House Measure by Two and One-Half Billions.

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, July 23—Secretary Morgenthau called for a two and one-half billion dollar boost in the tax bill today with a warning that only bold war taxation could bring America a sound economic future.

He appealed to the senate finance committee to increase the house-approved $6,271,000,000 tax measure to a minimum of $8,700,000,000. Substantially, the administration asked the same revenue from the same sources proposed to the house months ago. He pointed out that since these proposals were framed the schedule of war spending for the current fiscal year has been stepped up by $14,000,000,000 while the house sliced about $2,400,000,000 from the revenue measure.

"If the house bill were to become law," he said, "it would be necessary to borrow from the public during this fiscal year about $53,000,000,000. To the extent that we enlist our current income tax taxes to cut down this borrowing we shall be protecting the future economic soundness of our country and our free institutions. To the extent that we fail, we shall be endangering the survival of all that we are fighting to preserve."

Asks Income Tax Boost

Compared with the house measure, Morgenthau asked new individual income taxes be boosted from $2,872,300,000 to $3,228,000,000; additional corporate taxes, including excess profits, increased from $2,589,200,000 to $3,347,700,000; revised excise taxes to be raised from $816,800,000 to $1,253,700,000; changes in estate and gift taxes to produce $316,100,000; and removal of "loopholes" to bring in another $601,500,000.

Of most importance to the general public, Morgenthau requested a scale of personal income tax exemptions of $600 for single persons, $1,200 for married persons, and $300 each for dependents. The present law is $750, $1,500 and $400 and the house voted for $500, $1,200 and $400.

Under its scale of exemptions, the treasury estimated that 26,900,000 individuals would pay taxes next year, compared with 15,000,000 under present law.

Aides said the treasury's specific corporate tax proposals were undergoing slight changes, but would be based on a 90 per cent excess profits tax with the last 10 per cent of the tax rate to be refunded after the war.

Repeals Request

Morgenthau also asked again for new excise taxes on soft drinks, candy and chewing gum, and increased rates on beer, wine, cigarets, gasoline, oil, and transportation. He opposed a new tax of 5 per cent on freight and express voted by the house.

The secretary reiterated requests for mandatory joint income tax returns by married couples, repeal of percentage depletion allowances for oil companies, and repeal of income tax exemptions on interest from state and municipal bonds. He asked for the taxes in the name of the President's program to hold down the cost of living.

"Taxation," he said, "does more than supply money to finance the war. * * * wartime taxation also plays an important part in preventing rapid and continued increases in the cost of living. Ceilings have been placed on prices. This fact may have caused many people to be unduly optimistic about the future of the cost of living. It cannot be too strongly emphasized that if the price ceilings are to be maintained and rapid and continuous price rises avoided, the pressure of the large and expanding volume of consumer purchasing power on the diminishing supply of goods must be reduced."

BURIED SCRAP CACHE FOUND AT MANSFIELD

WPB Investigation Traces Tips to 20,000 Tons.

By The Associated Press

CLEVELAND, July 23—Thousands of tons of stoves, refrigerators and ice-boxes, long buried in a city dump at Mansfield, O., will be moved to the mills as scrap iron and steel because a "scrap sleuth" for the war production board ran down some rumors.

Possibly as much as 20,000 tons of metal can be salvaged, it was estimated by R. F. Kenney, regional chief of the WPB's special salvage projects section. The material will be sold to a scrap dealer for preparation and shipment to steel furnaces.

It was scrapped by various manufacturing plants in Mansfield because of defects or because it failed to meet the manufacturers' requirements, Kenney said.

A. W. Orr, a WPB salvage inspector, received credit for tracking down the cache. After the WPB requisitioned a review full of refrigerators on a farm near Dayton, O., several months ago, there were reports that a similar pile existed in Mansfield.

Orr found a promising clue at the local postoffice, the sender of the Mansfield dump, and then followed the manufacturing data.

Kenney said that through the cooperation of city officials, a plan was devised to keep tracks of the [illegible]

27 Men and One Woman from Ten States Charged with Conspiracy.

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, July 23—A federal grand jury has indicted 27 men and one woman in ten states for conspiring to break down morale in the armed forces and thus "obstruct and defeat the war effort."

The indictment, returned secretly Tuesday after nine months' investigation, was announced today by Attorney General Biddle as it was opened in federal district court here.

The lone woman defendant is Mrs. Elizabeth Dilling of Chicago, who was mentioned in the indictment as having used as an alias the name Rev. Frank Woodruff Johnson.

The indictment is in two counts, one alleging violation of the so-called sedition law, which carries a maximum penalty of 20 years' imprisonment, and the others alleging violation of a law prohibiting interference with the armed forces which carries a maximum penalty of ten years.

Thirty publications, some of them already barred from the mails as seditious, and 28 organizations, including the German-American bund; the America First Committee, and the Ku Klux Klan, were listed as having been used to further the conspiracy.

These men were named defendants: Gerald B. Winrod of Wichita, Kan., Herman Max Schwinn of Los Angeles, George Sylvester Viereck, alias J. B. Hamilton of New York and Washington, William Griffin of New York, Hans Diebel of Los Angeles, H. Victor Broenstrupp, alias the Duke of St. Saba, Count Victor Cherep-Spiridovich, Lieutenant General Cherep-Spiridovich, Colonel Bennett, J. G. Francis of New York and Noblesville, Ind.

BRITISH SAY ARMY OF NILE IS ADVANCING

Report Progress Made Along Entire Front West of El Alamein.

By The Associated Press

CAIRO, July 23—British headquarters announced today that the army of the Nile had made some progress along the entire front west of El Alamein in sharp fighting yesterday and had consolidated its gains.

RAF bombers scored many direct hits on Axis stranded cars, tanks and trucks during the operations and fighter planes maintained constant patrols over the battle area, a communique said.

Armored forces as well as infantry were engaged in the battle in the central sector, which centered around Axis positions on the western end of strategic El Ruweisat ridge. Attacking British forces achieved some gains here, and consolidated their positions, headquarters reported.

Fighting in the northern sector was reported to have see-sawed around Tel El Eisa—the "Hill of Jesus"—and around El Makh Khad and Meteiriya ridges, apparently with inconclusive results.

Fighting Spread

The battle started in the central sector and the fighting spread out along the entire front yesterday morning when British troops on the northern and southern flanks joined in the assault.

It was the first time the British were on the attack on all sectors of the El Alamein front simultaneously.

Before nightfall Australian veterans in the coastal sector were reported to have occupied all of Tel El Eisa ridge—the "Hill of Jesus"—portions of which have changed hands repeatedly in recent sporadic fighting.

Axis forces also gave ground on the central and southern sectors, advices from the battle ground last night said.

RAF bombers, dominating the skies, continued their smashing assaults on German Marshal Rommel's armor and unflagging patrol of the battle area as the British troops consolidated inching gains of yesterday.

The Italian high command announced, however, that the British had been repelled everywhere and counterattacked, losing 800 prisoners, mostly New Zealanders and Indians, and 130 tanks destroyed on the field. Rome said the fighting had assumed a character of particular tenacity.

Say 10 Planes Destroyed

The Italian communique said that 10 Allied planes were destroyed yesterday over Egypt and Malta and that a 10,000 ton steamer was sunk by Axis air attack out of a convoy off Port Said.

The British reported seven of their planes downed over north Africa and Malta and three Axis craft destroyed.

The situation in Egypt, undoubtedly of prime importance in Allied consideration of a second front, was one of incipient threat to Alexandria but the crisis, by outward appearances, had passed.

London military experts said it was obvious that General Auchinleck's army had been heavily reinforced and was moving forward in all sectors with the intention of forcing a decisive battle. While shying from predictions, those sources seemed quietly optimistic.

The German high command said more than 1,000 prisoners had been captured and 131 British tanks destroyed, slightly larger claims than the Italians made.

USE OF METERS STARTS FRIDAY

Installation of 170 New Units Being Completed; Some Provide 2-Hour Parking.

Installation of 170 new parking meters in Marion's downtown district was being completed today, and city officials announced enforcement of meter parking in the new areas will begin at 8 o'clock tomorrow morning.

Officials again called attention to the fact that Marion is getting some two-hour meters in the new group. Meters mounted on posts that are painted blue carry two-hour meters, while all those on posts of aluminum color are one-hour meters.

Benefits Expected

Safety-Service Director Clyde C. Caldwell said the new meters are expected to be of benefit both to motorists and to city officials. They will help alleviate a shortage of parking space in the downtown district that has become more serious in recent months as war projects swelled the city's population. Also, they will simplify the police department's job of enforcing parking regulations and are also expected to contribute some revenue to the city treasury.

When the installation work is completed today, Marion will have 275 parking meters.

The new meters are to be used under a one-year rental plan. The city will pay $3.50 a month rent for each meter for a year's time and at the expiration of the year may elect to have the meters removed or may take credit for the rental payments toward the purchase of the meters at a price of $61.50 each. The first 105 meters, installed in August of 1940, have already been purchased and have yielded more than $22,000.

New Areas

New areas served by one-hour meters are on West Center street from Prospect to Oak and on East Center street from State street to the first alley east of State street.

Areas newly served by two-hour meters are on West Center street from Oak to Orchard, Prospect street from Mill to Church, South Main street from Church to the second alley south of Church and South State street from Center to Church.

RUSSIA FACES GRAVEST CRISIS IN CAUCASUS

German Drives Advance To Split Two Soviet Commands in South.

By The Associated Press

MOSCOW, July 23—Soviet Russia faced her gravest crisis in the 13-month-old German-Russian war today as Nazi armored columns closed in for the second battle of Rostov, speared anew toward Stalingrad and pressed upon the lower Don between those cities in an effort to isolate the Caucasus.

Not since the Mongols were driven from southern Russia 362 years ago had there been such a threat to the military security of the nation, observers said.

Red army men fought bitterly to stem the invasion tides, aware that the Germans were more than half-way along on drives which might split the Russians' southern and trans-Caucasian commands.

Rostov was menaced from three sides—at Novocherkassk, 20 miles northeast of the city, from the north by a large force, including Italians, striking from Voroshilovgrad, and from the west by Axis divisions which wintered at Taganrog, 40 miles away.

Three-Way Drive

Similarly a three-directional threat developed against Stalingrad, 230 air miles northeast of Rostov. The central and most advanced column was astride the Stalingrad-Likhaya railway line slightly more than 100 miles west of the Volga city.

Russian dispatches disclosed that a spearhead of Field Marshal Gen. Fedor Von Bock's 1,000,000-man army had engaged the defenders of Rostov, a Don Delta port from which the invaders were driven by the combined firepower of Russian soldiers and guerrillas after a brief occupation last November.

The Don offered no protection for Rostov except from attack from the south, for most of the city lies on the lofty northern bank of the river, 13 miles up from the sea of Azov.

Along with the peril to Rostov and the drive upon Stalingrad, a dangerous threat faced by the Russians was a German effort to cross the Don at Tsimlyansk, 130 miles northeast of Rostov.

A drive of 30 miles across the river at that point would cut Stalingrad's last railway link with Rostov and the Caucasus. Sal, Zimovniki or Kotelnikovo might be German objectives in this direction. All are on the railroad a few miles south of the Don.

Report Nazi Losses

Amid these grave developments, however, Russian counterattacks persisted against the Nazi left wing at Voronezh and about 9,000 Germans were reported killed as "our troops forced back the enemy and improved their positions."

Some 6,000 invaders were listed as slain in a successful drive to recapture a large settlement south of that city.

A powerful German drive to recross the upper Don west of Voronezh was repulsed and 15 tanks were destroyed, it was announced.

The Soviet information bureau reported at midnight that Russian soldiers, bracing after a long retreat across the steppes of the Don, had engaged the enemy at Novocherkassk, on a ravine-cut plateau 20 miles northeast of Rostov.

"In the area of Novocherkassk our troops conducted defensive fighting," the mid-day communique announced. "Beating off the German attack, our troops are wearing down enemy forces and inflicting heavy losses. In the course of 24 hours in one sector alone a Soviet detachment killed 470 German officers and men."

Two of the three or four armored vanguards hitting toward the lower Don, the Volga and the Caspian sea flank apparently were accounted for.

Other Germans striking southeastward from Bogucharin a parallel drive, were disclosed earlier to be approaching the border of Stalingrad province, part of which lies within the big bend of the Don.

These were still 130 miles or so from Stalingrad itself, but Field Marshal Von Bock's offensive already had carried more than 250 miles eastward from his Kharkov front bases.

Drop in Caucasus

The Germans were deep within the north Caucasian area and menacing the trans-Caucasus, producers of wheat, sugar beets, corn, potatoes, livestock and poultry that help feed Russia's millions and petroleum resources that [illegible]

BRITAIN BEING AMERICANIZED

Former Berlin Correspondent Compares Situations in England and Germany.

NEW YORK — (Wide World)— Blake Sullivan, an Associated Press and Wide World correspondent in London, glanced up from his desk one day recently and encountered Edwin Shanke, an old friend he hadn't seen since their days at Marquette university nine years ago.

Shanke, an Associated Press and Wide World correspondent in Berlin until U. S. entry into the war, had been assigned to the London bureau when released from internment in Germany—and one of the first things he wanted to see was London's Hyde Park.

"As you know," Sullivan wrote to friends here, "there is a corner of Hyde Park equivalent to New York's Union Square. The stump speakers flout the government, criticize Churchill—yes, and the Americans catch it, too.

"Ed was amazed. He walked from one speaker to the other with a wide grin on his face. He said it was a pleasure hearing people say what they thought.

"In Berlin, he said, a speaker couldn't even get a soapbox, and if he opened his mouth the Gestapo would haul him away.

"Shanke also said the British were eating much better than the Germans, and that the average German lost hope of winning the war when the U. S. got into it."

"London gradually is becoming Americanized," Sullivan continued. "There are so many U. S. soldiers over here now the English are beginning to lose their English accent.

"American movies are doing their part, and now I've seen a baseball game here.

"I watched two American teams playing yesterday. About 300 others were looking on, including many Englishmen, and the British reaction soon proved more fascinating than the game.

"All agreed it was 'quite different' from cricket and another game they play over here called 'rounders.'

"One Englishman who apparently considered himself an authority on the game gravely explained to bystanders: 'When the batter hits the ball, all the basemen are supposed to run.'

"But the best comment of all was that of an elderly woman who disapproved of the way the players shouted at the umpire.

"'How verry, verry rude!' she exclaimed.

"The players had more than their share of troubles, too. The English think nothing of cutting right across the diamond in the middle of a play."

Sullivan said the British now drink watered beer, that Scotch whisky is almost unobtainable, and hence tea is in greater demand than ever.

He quoted a headline which appeared in the staid London Times recently:

"Official action must be taken."

Here's some good news we CAN tell you!

● Is industry stepping up production of the vital materials our fighting forces so desperately need to win this war?

It would do your heart good just to see some of the things we Erie men who live among you get to see in the course of our work. Guns and tanks and planes and one thousand and one other tools of Victory speeding east and west over our tracks—more today than yesterday, still more of them tomorrow.

Sure it keeps us moving to keep 'em rolling. But it makes us all mighty proud to be working for the Erie—when every carload we send on its way brings America that much closer to Victory.

Jap Beetle War on Again

By HERMAN ALLEN
Wide World Features Writer

WASHINGTON — While the west coast is worried about a Japanese beetle on the east coast is fighting one.

The Japs landed in 1916 and have been occupying more ground ever since. However, our defending forces are putting a stout battle, using a new (to Japanese beetles) weapon for one thing and hope to turn the upper hand in a few more years.

These particular Japanese are the Japanese beetles which are believed to have smuggled into the country in earth packed around the roots of nursery plants. They were first found at Riverton, N. J., a few miles east of Philadelphia, in a nursery. Since then they have been observed as far west as St. Louis.

The Japanese beetle devours many varieties of fruit, vegetable and ornamental plants. About the size of your little finger nail, he sports coppery brown wings and is a shining metallic green underneath. He has two small white tufts just behind his wings and five white patches along each side of his body. You can't miss him.

Popillia Japonica (as the scientific boys call him) appears in mid-June and may hang around as late as October. Although he flies quite a little, it took him from 1916 to 1925 to spread out around Philadelphia to an area of 2,200 square miles—a section of New Jersey and Pennsylvania a little less than 50 miles square.

Marching On

By 1929 he had more than doubled that, and last summer he was spread fairly thickly over an area of 20,600 square miles—most of New Jersey and Delaware, a large part of Maryland, southeastern Pennsylvania, the area around New York City, and also [illegible] up into Connecticut and [illegible] into Virginia.

The edge of the heavily infested area has pushed outward at the rate of only [illegible] to 10 miles a year in most places.

But [illegible] beetles are the worst [illegible] you ever saw," says [illegible] Parker, an agriculture department expert. "They'll fly into your car and start spreading new colonies hundreds of miles away. They've been found on ships at sea.

In larva or grub stage, the Japanese beetle feeds on plant and grass roots. This is the stage in which to fight him with "milky disease."

This one survived, and is ready to go to work. Popillia Japonica is a natty looking insect with zoot suit of coppery brown and shining metallic green.

Meet him face to face!

"We have trapped half a dozen in Florida and there was quite an infestation around St. Louis in 1934. We caught 1,351 out there that year with traps, but control measures worked so well that last year, with even more traps, we caught only 15.

Some Are Just Restless

"Then, in addition to the hitchhikers, there always seems to be a certain number who just get the urge to get up and go. Those are the ones we blame for the slow but steady spread of infestation."

In the long run, the department of agriculture depends on a disease called "milky disease," which it is spreading, to beat the beetle. This bacterial ailment, harmless to humans, animals and plants, kills the grubs, which destroy the roots of plants and grass. Its effectiveness is shown by the fact that the beetle is scarcer now in the older infestation area around Philadelphia, where the disease was first encountered.

"Eventually," says Porter, "we hope to reduce the insect to the status of a local pest, which may have its ups and downs but which should hold far below the present heavy infestation level.

"The first wave of a new infestation—and this can be regarded as fairly new — is usually the worst, then it levels off. We hope to hurry past the peak, perhaps even flatten it."

CRITIC SCORES TWO OHIO CONGRESSMEN

Declares Colleagues Are Using House for Political Ends.

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, July 23—Two Ohio congressmen, contesting for the state's lone "at-large" seat available next year, were criticized by a colleague for carrying their political battle to the floor of the house.

Representative Keefe (R-Wis) asserted both Ohioans were "using the House as a sounding board," intending to "have their political speeches franked and mail them by the thousands at public expense."

Keefe's remarks yesterday followed statements by Rep. Stephen M. Young (D-Ohio) concerning the legislative voting of Rep. George H. Bender (R-Ohio) in the House prior to Pearl Harbor.

"We want no isolationists in congress when the time comes to write the peace," said Young, "or we'll have to fight a war all over again."

Bender replied he thought it a "shame and a disgrace to inject politics into the debate of the House at a time when the minority is doing everything possible to cooperate in a successful prosecution of the war."

One of the state's two seats-at-large will be eliminated next year because of population changes.

TRAINING OF CHEMISTS

By International News Service

CHICAGO — Industry and education have teamed up in Chicago to train chemists for a nation at war. Fifty students, including six girls, are studying in Illinois Institute of Technology classrooms in the first academic session of the new cooperative course in chemistry. After completing a 16-week course, the students will take place in industry while another group already in chemical plants will begin a similar period of classroom work.

Each soldier during his first of service requires 200 pounds of wool, representing the fleece of 15 sheep.

Baltimore Has School for "Grease Monkeys"

By The Associated Press

BALTIMORE—There is a new institution of learning in Baltimore—"The College of Airplane Knowledge" — but only army "grease monkeys" may attend.

Every 12 days 175 graduates of the army air forces technical training school are enrolled in the "college" at the Glenn L. Martin company plant. There they take 84-day courses and then put them to apply in practice what they have learned at the factory about the Martin B-26 bomber. Then they are assigned to bomber squadrons equipped with this type of plane.

Cuba's present planted area, now matching, is expected to provide about 1,[illegible] tons of sugar available for export.

OHIO MAN SUGGESTS SUB COMBAT METHOD

Joins Coast Guard To Demonstrate His Earnestness.

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, July 23—Back [illegible] Fred Wakefield sat in [illegible] at Vermilion, O., wondering like other Americans, how to combat the German submarine. He reached two decisions. He wrote a letter to his congressman suggesting that lives, even ships, might be saved by the use of motor boats off shore. And he joined the coast guard.

By coincidence, perhaps the navy is in process of engaging small boats for purposes similar to those recommended by the young Ohioan, said Rep. A. D. Baumhart Jr., (R-Ohio).

"I am happy to note," said Baumhart who put Wakefield's letter in the House record, "that the navy now is seeking 1,000 yachtsmen and their boats to fight the submarine on both coasts."

A letter from the navy to Baumhart said Wakefield's suggestions were appreciated but added that they offered no new ideas not already known to the navy department.

Baumhart sent Wakefield's letter to Secretary Knox. The reply came from Commander H. L. [illegible]

WANT TO KEEP YOUR YARD ATTRACTIVE ALL SUMMER?

Be Sure to Water Grass and Flowers Properly

"Most important summer aid for an attractive yard is—water!" That's what the experts at Purdue University say.

To keep your yard fresh during hot weather, read these sprinkling helps the soil authorities list:

• "To watering your yard imitate rainfall—make a spray of your hose. Wet grass and flowers thoroughly . . . moisture must reach the roots (about five inches deep)."

• "Evening is the best time to sprinkle. But whenever you sprinkle, water much. Light sprinkling causes surface roots easily killed by sun."

• "Be sure to get the water into the ground—not merely on it!"

Important

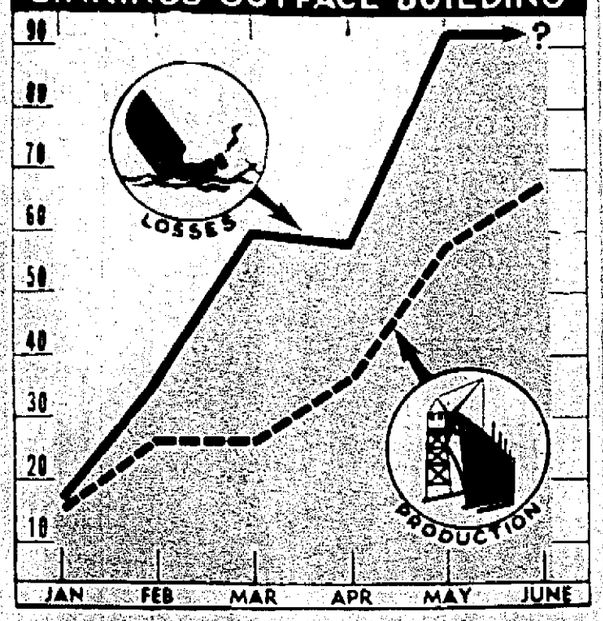
SINKINGS OUTPACE BUILDING



Wide World Features

America's merchant ship construction program is steadily turning out more and more vessels in shorter periods of time—but it is still outpaced by enemy submarine sinkings. This chart shows how building and sinking were almost even at the start of 1942, how sub toll soared rapidly and at far faster pace. Ship losses indicated are those of the United Nations in the Atlantic between longitude 26 (the Azores) and our eastern seaboard. June losses passed the 100 mark.

Stop and See the Boys

By EDDY GILMORE
Wide World Feature Writer

KUIBYSHEV—Way out in Siberia's Omsk live three fur buyers—the Messrs. Scheer, Hollander and Solow—as American as Brooklyn bridge or an Alabama barbecue.

They have become the unofficial welcoming committee for any and all Americans who happen through Omsk on the trans-Siberian railway. They're the glad-hand boys who want to talk about furs and home—but mostly home.

Obviously, not many Americans breeze through Omsk, but there are a few, at least three within the last six months. All were members of the United States embassy or consular staffs.

The Messrs. Scheer, Hollander and Solow live at Omsk's principal hostelry, the Sovietskay Sibly hotel. Their business is buying furs for American firms.

They're Psychic

Americans who have seen them lately say they can spot an American traveling on the trans-Siberian as far, or farther, than they can the pelt of the princely silver fox making his way across the Siberian waste.

"I don't know how it is," said an American major just returned, "but those boys were at the train to meet me when it pulled in."

Nobody ever seems to come back with the first names of the Messrs. Scheer, Hollander and Solow, but there's a prevailing opinion that Mr. Hollander's handle is Sid.

The three have been in Siberia six years, going back to the United States every two years. There are rumors that Messrs. Solow and Scheer are getting ready to pull anchors soon for home leave.

Also there's the prevailing opinion that all three gentlemen are from Brooklyn, and proud of it.

Do they keep busy? Well, I'll give it to you like I got it—from the Major:

"Busy?" shouted Messrs. Scheer, Hollander and Solow in chorus, "why, the United States buys 75 per cent of its furs from Russia, and you don't have that West Point mathematical education for nothing that wouldn't tell you that we three are 100 per cent of America's fur buyers in Russia. Are we busy?"

Well, It's Like This

The Messrs. Scheer, Hollander and Solow have lived among Siberians so long they have definite ideas about the Russian inhabitants of the region.

"Are they tough?" asked one—the Major forgot which one, for they are inclined to talk at once—"are they tough? Why, they'll kick the daylights out of any Nazi in the world!"

Messrs. Scheer, Hollander and Solow may be short on news from home, but all the visiting firemen say they're long on hospitality. They want it definitely known that they are always home.

First Things Still First

IF IT had been recognized for what it was, instead of what it purported to be, congressional revision of the selective service act in the interests of deferring married men would not have been so confusing. In other words, the great congressional thirst for winning friends just before election was permitted to manifest itself. The result was a lot of chaos that could have been averted, a vast deal of misunderstanding and hard feeling that could have been averted if congress had let the selective service act alone.

Interpretations of the change as embodied in the regulations issued by national selective service headquarters clear the air. First aim of the draft is what it always was, to provide men for the armed forces. As long as possible, the men will be taken from the classification of single men. When the boards run out of single men, they will take married men. In all cases, dependency will be the prime test for deferment. Congress may have won the gratitude of married men and their wives, but congress has not altered the grim circumstance that before the United States has all the fighting men it wants married men will be in the ranks in great numbers.

Getting in the Scrap

THE United States is, we like to tell one another, the richest country on earth. That doesn't mean gold buried at Fort Knox, but resources—all kinds.

It hasn't been customary to think of junk as a resource, but it is now. The war production board has sanctioned a nationwide appeal for all kinds of old metal, rubber, other vital material, even grease.

There is a special need for scrap iron and steel—a need easier to understand in steel producing centers than in some other places. Either the United States will turn to and get in the scrap, or its war production goals won't be reached. Old iron and steel are needed to make new steel for the tools of war.

Americans are so accustomed to using iron and steel freely that they have grown careless with it. The objects they have discarded, however, represent part of the wealth they boast about. Junk is on the critical list.

Purpose of intensified salvage campaigns is to bring this resource to bear on the problem of sustaining war production at the level required to assure victory. Certainly one of the most practical ways to do this would be for each family to take inventory of metal in its possession that can be turned over for salvage—broken lawn mowers, baby buggies—all the dozens of metal objects that have been stored in basements, attics, garages, or allowed to rust in back yards and fields.

In the mind of every citizen these last few months there has been the question of how to contribute something useful to the war effort. This is one complete answer. Round up scrap metal. Start it on its way to the steel mills. Industry and the armed forces will do the rest.

Second Front Talk at Home

PRESUMABLY the psychological effect of so much second front talk on Germany is bad. Otherwise, there would be no point in making it the subject for a kind of open forum debate on its merits, demerits, risks and advantages.

But meanwhile the psychological effect at home is beginning to need consideration. It is beginning to be troublesome, also, according to observers in Russia, where the people have been encouraged to think there is going to be a second front this year—not next year but this year.

Experts in psychological warfare, used to direct purpose by the Nazis, have explained that Hitler, himself, made no secret of his plans before they were put into effect. But Hitler backed up his plans with action. If this year were to end without action, the talk would boomerang, not necessarily against the Germans but against the United Nations. The Germans would have gained the thing they need most—time to carry out their plan of conquest, which calls for fighting one antagonist at a time.

Design for a Front Window

THE "V" certificate that office of civilian defense plans to give cooperating households for display in a front window will have to go in the lower left-hand corner. In the middle of the upper sash is a service flag with its proud blue star. The Red Cross emblem is being displayed directly beneath it. To one side is the certificate of participation in the War Savings campaign. The other corner has to be left open for the bakery wagon card. Some space must be saved, also, for measles, whooping cough and scarlet fever signs as they come and go. Just where to put political campaign signs already is a problem. What with USO signs, a smattering of potted plants and a peck basketful of trinkets, the front window is getting so full that the overflow may have to be accommodated in what little space remains on the windshield of the automobile.

To feed an army of 3½ million men, 20 million pounds of food must daily be purchased, shipped, tabulated and issued.

News Behind the News

By PAUL MALLON

This one goes down at an unprecedented speed to an unbelievable depth. Various stories suggest it can drop to a 300-foot level as fast as a rock.

Apparently it can stand a depth of 600 feet, where pressure is greater than submarines have been able to venture before. These great depths diminish the chance of reaching it with ordinary depth bombs.

Also the crafty Nazis are using a submarine engine which eliminates electrical batteries. No longer are they required to surface for long hours during the night to recharge their power.

On the surface they use a Diesel motor and below they operate on a hydrogen and oxygen mixture. This assures them greater security from detection.

The Hitlerites also have come up lately with a new type of magnetic mine, which is supposed to break through the perfected British defense arrangement for ships.

The British degaussing arrangement was founded on the principle that copper cables, placed around a vessel, would nullify its magnetism, and enable the ships to pass over magnetic mines without tripping or exploding them. A new German mine apparently penetrates the degaussing protection.

These few factors are enough in themselves to make the shipping situation as bad as all officialdom is proclaiming it to be. They have become apparent only within the last month or so.

Time will be required to meet them but they will be met. No device of warfare has ever been conceived against which adequate defense was impossible, and none ever will be.

More Japanese Threats

The Nipponese are withdrawing or weakening their forces in South China, and concentrating in three areas near the Russian frontier. Their forces in Manchuria and Korea have been enlarged within the last few weeks. Mechanized equipment has also been moved to these two districts.

A similar strengthening of the Jap garrisons in outer Mongolia also has been noticed. The force in this latter area obviously threatens the Lake Baikal area of Siberia and the trans-Siberian railroad.

The Japs would have no great difficulty cutting that road and serving the line of supplies from the Urals to the eastern Red armies.

Their force was not yet large enough to move at last accounts. But even a few saboteurs could play havoc with the railroad in the central Siberian district where it winds through 43 tunnels within 21 miles.

Victory Is Empty

Those three South China seaports, which General Chiang Kai-shek's valiant but ill-armed troops recently recaptured, are of little practical use. The Jap navy and air force control the sea and, in effect, maintain a blockade through which our aid to China cannot be expected to move.

The new ground gained by the Chinese is valuable chiefly for air bases from which our air force eventually can reach Tokyo and the Formosa naval base.

But it would be expecting too much to interpret these victories as evidence of anything more than Chinese local successes. The Chinese still have insufficient artillery and air power to start a major campaign.

So it looks from here as if the Japanese had decided the monsoon season in Burma, and the closing of the Burma road, and the static situation in central and southern China, would make it safe for them to move their heaviest fire power up north, where the months of August and September afford the best season of the year for mechanized attack.

These shifts aid the Chinese materially, however, because they relieve the pressure on Chungking and Kunming. The Japs would have to keep the ground from which they are withdrawing in order to launch any successful campaign against these two key Chinese cities.

Naming of Admiral Leahy Expected To Help in Prosecution of War.

By WALTER LIPPMANN

IT IS evident that the power of Admiral Leahy will be what Mr. Roosevelt and he make it. Admiral Leahy has no command. But the President is the commander in chief—and Admiral Leahy, lacking any personal authority of his own, will have more direct, continual and close relation than any one else with the source of all military authority. So everything depends on the personalities and the personal relationship of the two men, and in this context the appointment has great potentialities.

For the office of commander in chief is indispensable in a global and three-dimensional war on so many scattered fronts. Yet no man could hope to fill the office if he does not have a staff standing between him and the separate services, between him and the pressure of our many allies. For the initial problem of the commander in chief is to make hard choices which confront him because the total needs of all the fronts is much greater than the military force available. Only a staff, working coolly and methodically, can see to it that he is protected against making his decisions on the ground of sentiment and accident, or because of weariness in saying no.

The greater problem of the commander in chief is how and when to seize the strategical initiative; whenever this is done at any one point on the globe it will call for enormous risks and sacrifices elsewhere. So grave a decision can not be taken properly unless the commander in chief himself has a staff specially devoted to judging the plan by considerations that are much wider—because they include vast political and social factors—than the operational staffs can be expected to pass upon finally.

Most Available Man

For this particular post Admiral Leahy has long been much the most available man, so much so that many have begrudged the time he spent in Vichy when he was obviously needed in Washington.

The office of commander in chief is what the man who is President makes it. Mr. Roosevelt, like Lincoln before him in the earlier years of his war, has shown a strong disposition, at least as regards the navy, to decide too many things that the commander in chief should not have to decide. He has tried to do a great many things that ought to be done by the secretary of the navy and the chief of naval operations. This is humanly understandable. The temptation must have been great: Mr. Roosevelt is a former assistant secretary of the navy who became President. Every one knows that civilian secretaries have never had much to say in the presence of admirals; having become President, Mr. Roosevelt has enjoyed having his say, has enjoyed being the kind of secretary of the navy that no civilian can be unless he is President.

But, of course, he does not have time to be secretary of the navy. He has time only to dabble in being secretary of the navy. The effects have been deplorable, not at all in the sense that Mr. Roosevelt has mismanaged the navy, but in the sense that his hovering presence at the White House has deprived the navy of the kind of civilian direction which the highly professionalized navy needs.

The lack of effective civilian control, such as the army does have, has been made manifest in many ways: in the West Point-Annapolis rivalry which did not end with the disaster at Pearl Harbor and is not wholly ended yet; in the grave deficiencies of naval planning which are the cause of our not having enough escorts to deal with the submarine; in the slowness with which the navy department roused itself to the seriousness of the submarine war, and in the patent personal inadequacy of some of the officers charged with commanding the campaign. These are examples of the kind of thing that a civilian secretary of the navy should be able to deal with. They have not been dealt with because the only secretary of the navy we have is Mr. Roosevelt, acting now and then on tidbits of information and his intuitions. With Admiral Leahy at his right hand, we may hope for better days.

Unity Among Allies

There are many who feel that besides greater unity in the American command, there should be greater unity of command among the Allies. It is difficult for the outsider to form any practical judgment on how the Allied strategy could be better concerted, whether in fact Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Churchill and the combined chiefs of staff are surmounting the difficulties which have plagued every coalition in the history of war. For as one slightly depressed statesman said the other day: "I no longer think Napoleon was as great a man as I used to think he was. I realize now that he was fighting a coalition."

It is evident, however, that as the over-all command of the American forces becomes more lucid, more methodical and more salient, the United Nation's strategy in the west and in the Pacific will become more coherent. For coalitions have to be led. They cannot be commanded, and leadership will gravitate wherever there is force and the clearest conception of how to use it.

Beauty is but the sensible image of the Infinite. Like truth and justice it lives within us; like virtue and the moral law it is a companion of the soul.—Bancroft.

Those Reelection Blues

By JOHN GROVER

RANCOROUS congressional dogfights over the new tax bill and farm price legislation mirrored an acute case of pre-election jitters in the Congress.

Fair-minded political observers find much to sympathize with in the plight of congressmen faced with tough reelection contests this year. The troubles that beset them are only in part their own fault.

Most significant single factor in the farm price battle was, of course, the administrations late but effective "big stick" crackdown that defeated the united front farm front. It is strong indication that the administration, reluctantly but definitely, is committed to a firm anti-inflation policy despite the determined effort of the farm and labor blocs—the two most powerful pressure groups—to win price and wage concessions.

BASICALLY, the congressional schism stems from the divergent beliefs of incumbent Congressmen over the most effective vote-getting techniques in the coming elections.

There's nothing reprehensible in a Congressman wanting re-election and bending his best efforts to win another term. Any Congressman worth shucks seeks to represent his district to the end that he will be returned.

This year, the electorate is confused by the magnitude of the war effort. The "safe" old rules for re-election haven't their peacetime force. One group of Congressmen, mirroring the widespread uncertainty, is nevertheless clinging to the old system. These recoil in horror from levying excessive taxes, and are willing to "go along" with the powerful farm, labor and other organized pressure groups as anchors to windward in a stormy political sea.

The other group is committed to the belief that war's upheaval has abrogated the old rules, and that the people are demanding a bold, aggressive legislative program to prosecute the war effort. These do not shrink from tax proposals which would be regarded as suicidal in peacetime election year. They are willing to defy the powerful pressure groups in the belief that the unorganized mass of potential voters will support anti-inflationary laws designed to put the brakes on a runaway war economy.

INCUMBENT Congressmen are in a tough spot. This Congress and the one before it have been in almost continuous session since Jan. 3, 1939. They've worked harder than Congressmen ever did before, and in consequence have lost touch with the home folks.

Congressman Luther Patrick of Alabama, admittedly an able representative, was defeated in the June Alabama primaries. When he returned, he took the floor for 37 minutes to tell the boys about it. What he had to say scared many a congressman pea-green.

That loss of touch with the home community is really an unfair handicap to congressmen. Patrick said he was accused of "going high hat" because the pressure of defense business had kept him away from home so long. Others accused him of dereliction of duty for coming home for a brief campaign while congress was in session.

He warned other congressmen that the pensions-for-congressmen bill got a very sour reaction around the country. Patrick opposed the measure from the start, but his people ignored that fact and blasted the daylights out of him in resentment against the pension plan. The congressmen who unwarily accepted unlimited "X" cards when gas rationing was invoked also are in for a hot time, Patrick said.

He also listed other complaints of the electorate as: (a) failure to enact "a tax program we can depend on"; (b) failure of congress to see to it that the people are fully informed on the progress of the war effort; (c) "lag and drag" in congress on prosecution of the war.

Don't think congressmen didn't take it to heart. They now know that the pension plan and "X" card acceptance were ill-advised. Many of them know that they've got to "get right" before they go home for their campaigns, to make records that will wipe out the impression of those acts, or face defeat.

Mr. Hoover's Men

FBI Ready When Trouble Started Explodes Myth That Other Side Is Always Smarter.

By DAMON RUNYON

THE work so far of the federal bureau of investigation in this war proves that at least we have no weakness in that part of our national defense. Under good looking, silver-witted J. Edgar Hoover, the redoubtable G-man, they have already demonstrated an alertness far beyond that of any department directly connected with the stern business of fighting the foe.

Their immediate efficiency on the outbreak of the war undoubtedly traces to the preparation against exactly this contingency that was begun by Mr. Hoover long ago. He was onto the Nazis in this country several years before hostilities opened, as is indicated by his department's record of warfare against bundists and all other subversive elements throughout the nation.

Probably Mr. Hoover knew and still knows every individual in the United States of subversive tendency and enemy connection. Many have been rounded up and stowed away in safe places, and those at large are most likely carefully tabbed and subject to nabbing at any moment. This is a large country with a large population, but the FB-eye has shown that it has a penetrating stare.

NO other department of the government enjoys the confidence of the people to the same extent as this organization. The recent apprehension of the saboteurs landed on the shores was just another instance of the vigilance of Hoover's men, but it increased public faith in them. Hoover himself is probably the greatest chief of any agency of this character we have ever had, and it is a good thing he was on the job for the war.

The far reaching extent of the FBI's knowledge of wrongs was demonstrated after Pearl Harbor, when Hoover's lads immediately laid hands on numerous bad Japanese along the west coast. Apparently Hoover had less confidence in the Japanese than some of our government heads in Washington and had long been "casing" the dangerous ones in connection with local police departments, so when the time came he knew the ones to grab.

Evidently he had been listing them even when Washington was kidding itself that there would be no war with Japan. He also had the Italian enemy aliens spotted. While sabotage is something that can never be completely avoided, the swift action of the FBI undoubtedly scotched many desperate plots and warded off incalculable damage.

I HAVE no means of knowing to what extent this nation engages in counter espionage, if any, though I assume it is not asleep on that point. I also conjecture that the FBI has a fist in that business and knows as much about what is going on in the enemy country as they know about what is going on here. The idea some persons entertain, that the other guy is always smarter about maneuvers of any nature than old Uncle Samuel is quite erroneous, as I think will be shown when the war story can be revealed.

The FBI has practically supplanted all the old time methods of secret service that began away back in the Revolution, when it was entrusted almost entirely to volunteers.

Patriots of the type of Nathan Hale. In the Civil war, an early Pinkerton was one of the first reliances of the north for information from behind the Confederate lines and both sides eventually had rather elaborate systems of espionage.

But never in its history has the nation had an organization as thoroughly competent in guarding against the foe from the inside, so to speak, as the federal bureau of investigation. You have probably read much of the supposedly machine-like quality of the secret services of other nations but they are not to be compared with Mr. Hoover's force in intelligence, in speed of operation, or any other way. This is one government agency that we can really boast about.

Notes from Washington

By JACK STINNETT

WASHINGTON—The Capital in War

He's the head of the multigraph and mimeograph division of one of our war agencies. I called his procurement department and told them that he had to have, as soon as possible, a can of talcum powder. (As nearly as I can get it, it is used as an ink dryer for carbon duplications.)

A week went by, and no can of talcum. Then his fourth frantic call. He was informed: "You are getting that from the middle west. It is expected to be along any day now."

Ten days later, after numerous additional frantic pleas, the order came through—24 cans of talcum powder.

The division chief, tearing out his mustache whisker at a time, finally got the procurement boss on the phone. "Why," he shouted, "24 cans?"

The multigraph division head nearly fainted. Before hanging up the receiver he said weakly, "But man, don't you know that 24 cans will last us exactly 24 years?"

Few congressmen who have been on the front observation lines have made such an impression on Washington as (Sen.) Maj. Gen. Henry Cabot Lodge Jr., who has just returned from Egypt, where he witnessed first-hand Rommel's drive across the Egyptian-Libyan border.

On the record and off, the Massachusetts Republican senator has had a lot to say about the performance of American tanks, desert warfare, the Nazis' 88-mm anti-tank gun, and especially strategy of that wily desert rat, Rommel.

Even his on-the-record comments have been most revealing and what he had to report to the war department must have been a shade short of sensational.

Still, the senator's military observations are just a minor flurry compared to the political whirlwind he has kicked up.

It started when Secretary of War Stimson (Republican, but all-out anti-isolationist) and Senator Lodge (formerly identified as a member of the isolationist bloc, but No. 1 booster of the upper house to leap into the fray of war) a highly commendatory letter, stating that his continued service in the senate would be most valuable.

Senator Lodge is up for reelection. His opponent is Rep. Joseph E. Casey (Democrat) who has been anything but isolationist. The campaign is a hot one. That letter could be important.

But no sooner had the secretary of war attested that the letter had no political significance than out came the White House with instructions to put ALL congressmen in the army, navy, etc., on inactive status.

STEEL COMPANY ACCEPTS ORDER

Republic To Abide by WLB Raise in Pay, but Cites Threat to Economy.

By The Associated Press

CLEVELAND, July 23 — The Republic Steel Corp. today notified the war labor board it would submit to the board's order for pay raises and union security for steelworkers, but contended the WLB decision is "unsound and constitutes a threat to the whole national economy."

In a letter to the board, President R. J. Wysor of Republic declared the company's compliance was prompted only by "these critical times."

"In normal times the company would exercise its right to appeal to the courts to test the legality of your directive orders," the letter added. "However these are not normal times. Such legal step, regardless of its merit, might seriously interfere with Republic's all-out war production."

"Republic is prepared to make any sacrifice to support the war effort and keep its production levels flowing at its present record breaking levels."

Republic, the nation's third largest steel producer, was the second of four "Little Steel" concerns to announce it would incorporate in contracts under negotiation with the CIO United Steelworkers of America the provisions of the WLB's order.

Bethlehem Steel Co. yesterday notified the board it would abide by the directive ordering wage increases for 157,000 workers while the Inland Steel Co. at Chicago said it intended to test in federal court the board's power to impose union security in labor contracts.

The other concern affected by the order is Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co.

Declaring itself "wholly out of sympathy" with the directive, the company asserted the steelworkers' wage increase "may well prove to be the starting gun in a race of disastrous inflation."

Taking part in the skit, written by Miss Eloise Coffman, will be Mrs. Warren Sawyer, Mrs. Edwin Spohn, Mrs. Richard Morgan and Mrs. Malcolm Lund.

The skit will describe some of the articles donated for the auction which will start at 10 a. m. and continue throughout the day, with J. J. Francis as the auctioneer. Proceeds will be used by the sponsors to finance the bringing of outstanding speakers here during the coming year.

TWO ARRESTED BY STATE HIGHWAY PATROLMEN

Marion Man Charged with Failure to Register as Car Dealer.

Marion and Delaware residents were arrested yesterday by the state highway patrol.

The state patrol reported that Mr. Messenger was arrested about 7 last night south of Marion on Route 23 and that he was bringing two automobiles from Columbus to Marion to sell. The driver of the second car was not held.

Christcelin Willey, 28, of near Delaware, was charged with reckless driving when she was arrested at 6:25 p. m. yesterday on Route 23, south of Marion. She was cited to appear Friday in the court of Mayor Hosea Spaulding of Delaware.

POWER COMMISSION CHECKING OHIO CO.

Probe To Determine Rate and Class Questions.

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, July 23 — The federal power commission announced it was investigating to determine whether Ohio Fuel Gas Co. should be classed as a natural gas firm and whether its rates were unreasonable or unduly discriminatory.

The commission yesterday also authorized the cities of Cleveland, Lakewood and Euclid, O., to participate in a new case involving East Ohio Gas Co.

The new East Ohio case arose from a controversy over rates. The company, which buys fuel from Hope Natural Gas Co. of West Virginia has applied for certification as a bona fide natural gas company as of last Feb. 7.

The commission ruled recently that Hope's wholesale rate to East Ohio had been illegal since 1939 and ordered a reduction from 36.6 cents a thousand cubic feet to 29.5 cents. Cities served by East Ohio contend the reduced wholesale rate should bring lower consumer charges.

The commission ordered Ohio Fuel last March to show why the commission should not rule that a rate agreement with Anchor Hocking Glass Corp. was unjust or discriminatory and why the agreement should not be investigated. The commission held the company failed to show why the investigation should not be made.

FALL STYLES MEET WPB RULES

By SUSAN BARDEN
International Illustrated Writer

SARTORIAL signs of autumn emphasizing the new regulations of the War Production Board were presented at a trend-setting fashion show at the Waldorf in New York recently.

The clothes modelled were a happy solution of priority difficulties and will please American women with their lines as much as they will please the government with their conservation of fabric.

Though there was no tucking, shirring and pleating allowed which would reduce the material from normal width and no bodice tops with two-piece dresses, and no jackets, coats, capes or boleros included as one unit with a dress, the clothes were just as smart, becoming and practical as they have been in past seasons.

The dark brown frock for daytime is made of only two and a quarter yards of wool. It has inserts of henna on the three-quarter length sleeves and staggered on the slim skirt at the hemline. There are dark brown tassels at the high neck and henna tassels on the inserts. A narrow self belt is worn at the natural waistline.

The gray woolen frock also features the three-quarter length sleeves and a high neck. It was a chemise-inspired style which is becoming and easy to wear as well as practical, because the lines are perfect either with or without a girdle. It has cross-stitching in red on the hem, sleeves and front. A gray Persian muff and hat complete the costume.

A minimum of yardage went into the making of the third dress which is of black and emerald green wool. The sleeves are long and the skirt is made in black with a blocked effect which graduates into a front panel on the front of the bodice and also goes around the high neck. The top of the frock is in emerald green. With the dress is worn a small black hat, black suede gloves, black calf shoes and a large black Persian muff.

Gallup Tells Axis About Democracy-Common Man

Article by Dr. George Gallup based on a broadcast he made over Friday night on an international hookup beamed for Australia and the Pacific. The broadcast will be from station WOR in New York City, American station said to be feared and hated by the Axis and the one they spend most of their time combatting.

By GEORGE GALLUP
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

The fundamental premise of democracy is belief in the common man. One of the most important results of this war is the proof it has given to justify that belief.

The Axis propagandists would have us think that the American people are torn by strife, greed and disunity, and that all democracies suffer from a paralyzing psychological anarchy which renders them incapable of action. Therefore, the dictators have abandoned the belief in the common man and belief in democracy with it.

History will one day record that this blind and stupid denial of the intelligence of the common man was Hitler's greatest mistake.

The heroic resistance of the people of England in the dark days of the blitz bombings, the high morale today which is indicated in widespread public demand for a second front in Europe, all bear witness to the unity and courage which is making democracy work in England. Here in the United States the people are displaying a fierce and persistent determination to get on with the war. There is no disunity. Moreover, and this is a fact often overlooked, there never has been any fundamental disunity among the people themselves so far as this war is concerned. Public opinion surveys show that every step leading up to the war was approved by a majority of the people. While there was no eagerness generally to get into the fight (people in democracies never do want to start wars), nevertheless the overwhelming majority of Americans believed as early as 1940 that the United States would enter the war. Moreover, they believed all along that bringing about the defeat of Hitler was more important to us and the world than staying out of the fight.

Issue Is Self-Government

The fundamental issue of the war is the question whether the democratic principle of self-government, of rule by the people, is to survive. The answer will depend on two factors—first whether the democratic system can prove itself efficient and capable of swift, decisive action in a crisis; and second, whether the common people have the wisdom and capacity to govern themselves.

One of the chief advantages claimed for the Fascist form of government is its administrative efficiency. When the will of a nation is in effect the will of but one man, speedy and decisive action is possible—problems can be met and handled without delay. At least there is short-term efficiency. In a democracy, on the other hand, the whole people, by means of the ballot, have the right to pass final judgment on important political policies. In a world which moves so rapidly as the modern world does, it is often desirable to know the people's will on basic policies at frequent intervals. With such knowledge the efficiency of democracy is greatly increased because the leaders can proceed to formulate their plans with a sure knowledge of public sentiment and without having to wait for the mandate of the next election. The supplying of this continuous knowledge of public opinion is the chief function of modern public opinion surveys. It seems to be significant that already four countries besides the United States have established such surveys—Britain, Canada, Australia and Sweden, the last three since the outbreak of the war.

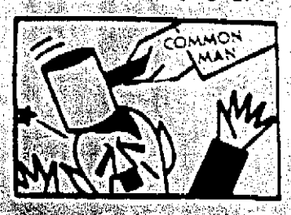
Are the opinions of the common man worthy of respect? Can the people in our democracies be trusted to govern themselves?

Public Opinion Sound

On that point the results of thousands of public opinion surveys yield a most eloquent and convincing answer in the affirmative.

In the course of conducting our surveys here in the United States, we have talked to hundreds of thousands of people selected with extreme care in such a way as to reflect accurately the views of the whole country. In the course of this work we have talked to farmers along the sun-baked back roads of Arkansas and Kentucky, to workers in the great industrial centers of Detroit, Pittsburgh, Cleveland and elsewhere, housewives, white collar clerks, to business leaders in skyscraper offices, to thousands of plain people of this country in every one of its 48 states. Throughout the length and breadth of the land we have rubbed elbows with the common people, seeking always to discover with scientific accuracy what these people are thinking and saying about the great problems which confront our government today.

I say with all sincerity that the common people are less likely to be swayed than any individual statesman, any superman or the statement of any group made up of the elite. Here in the United States we speak of this quality as common sense—a quality of judgment which characterizes the plain people of all nations when they are told the truth and are able to think and act on the basis of truth.



I do not mean that any single common man is wiser than any expert. I am talking about the collective judgment of the people of a democracy.

Let me give you an example. There was once a professor of physics who drew a line on the blackboard and asked the members of his class to guess the length of the line—which was actually five feet. Some members of the class guessed seven feet, some eight, some four, some only three. But the curious thing was that the average of all their guesses proved to be exactly correct—five feet. Individual judgments may be wrong, but the sum total of all judgments is usually surprisingly right.

I could cite many instances to show the abundant good sense of the plain people and their ability to size up a situation and come to conclusions as to what should be done. Here in the United States the public correctly appraised the value of airpower even before many of the experts themselves. The people were in favor of military conscription before their political leaders. Congressional representatives had advocated the plan. The American public has cheerfully accepted the burden of heavy wartime taxation and, in fact, is ready to shoulder an even greater load than the government has yet proposed. Can that be said of people in the dictator countries? In the whole battle against inflation the people are ahead of their government, desiring a program more drastic and far-reaching than anything yet attempted here. For at least four years before Pearl Harbor the majority resented and opposed the sale of American oil, scrap metal and other war supplies to the Japanese.

Views Far-Sighted

Current surveys show the people taking a sober, far-sighted view of the war. Alternate good news and bad news from the battlefronts has not led to exaggerated swing of elation and depression. The majority believe that it will take at least two more years of grim warfare to smash the Axis, and the people do not revise their estimates up and down with each day's war communiques.

This country is in an aggressive, fighting mood. There is a strong tide of sentiment in favor of opening a second front against Hitler now. The dominant attitude is that the present is the opportune time to strike, even though all the equipment may not be ready, or the last bolt tightened on the last tank. Although Japan was the first to attack our soil, the attitude of the majority is still that Germany is our No. 1 enemy.

President Roosevelt enjoys the confidence and support of the vast majority of his fellow countrymen, 80 percent of whom approve of the way he has handled his job as war president.

For many years the impression prevailed abroad that America was a land torn by sectional jealousies, that New England thought one way, the middle west another, and that the resulting clashes kept the country permanently divided. Under the cold analysis of public opinion surveys that theory has proved false. These surveys have shown no sectional differences of any importance so far as the common people are concerned. The American middle west, once considered the cradle of isolationism, is today just as much behind the war effort as any other section.

Favored League of Nations

A great deal of thought is being given here to the whole question of the post-war world and America's place in it. After the last war a bitter political fight arose over the question as to whether the United States should join the League of Nations. If that one issue had been put directly to the people, there is good evidence to believe that they would have voted to join the League. But the country's political leaders decreed otherwise.

Today, while we are engaged in another even greater world war, there is strong sentiment here in favor of having the United States participate in a world organization of nations when this conflict is over. Probably the most remarkable fact is that the rank and file of the Republican party—the party whose leaders fought successfully to keep America out of the League last time—are now in favor of American participation in a new league by the overwhelming majority of 7 to 3.

I hope Herr Goebbels or his Nazi propaganda minions are listening to this broadcast. They had better learn now that the American people are toughminded, that they display a collective judgment and common sense against which the futile bleatings of Axis propaganda are likely to make about as much impression as rose petals falling in the Grand Canyon of the Colorado river.

BIBLES FOR SOLDIERS

By The Associated Press

CLEVELAND, July 23—A band of business men who put Bibles at the fingertips of hotel guests, hospital patients, school children and prison inmates has taken upon itself the task of arming soldiers, sailors and airmen with the gospel. More than 3,000,000 testaments have been distributed among the nation's armed forces since Jan. 1, 1941, A. C. Feight of Van Wert, O., said today at opening sessions of the Gideons International 43rd annual convention. Two million more testaments are to be ordered soon and ultimately 10,000,000 will be distributed.

Scheib had written several weeks ago that he had "had a good look at the king and queen" and was approximately 25 feet from them when on review," and the family was on the lookout for the news release. When told that the news reel was on, the family went to the theater looking forward to seeing the boys their son was with and were surprised and thrilled to have such a "close up." Pvt. Scheib was inducted into Army service Oct. 28, last year at Fort Hayes, Columbus, and prior to shipping for Ireland was stationed at Camp Wheeler, Ga., and Fort Dix, N. J. Before going into military service he was employed at the A. & P. store for four years and later was a brakeman with the Erie Railroad Co.

In his letters to his family he describes the country as "beautiful." Meeting "someone you know" is a highlight in the overseas service, and one experienced by Private Scheib was meeting Bob Johnson of Chestnut street, after their landing in Ireland. The two were inducted on the same day, were together at Camps Wheeler and Dix, but did not embark for foreign service together.

The Day's News in Pictures

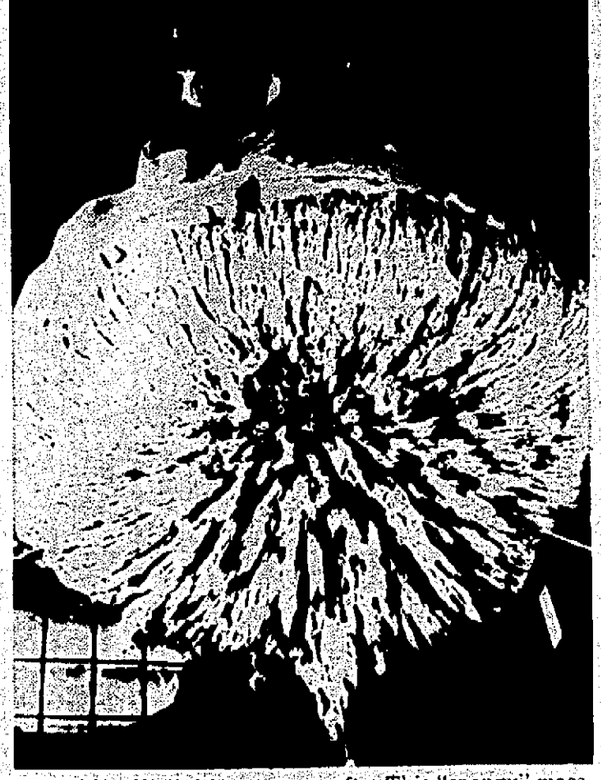
THEY'LL SHOW 'EM—The Japs are reputed to be experts at the injurious arts of ju-jitsu and judo, but they may start taking lessons from the Americans when some of our fighting men tangle with them. Sailors are pictured here learning a judo trick to avoid a bayonet thrust and put the attacker on the defensive.

DID A JOB—While in command of one of the United States Navy's little PT torpedo boats during the fighting in the Philippines, Lieut. Robert B. Kelly sank a Jap cruiser in the harbor of Cebu. Now he is rewarded by receiving the Navy Cross from Rear Admiral Wilson Brown at First Naval District headquarters in Boston.

GETTING THEIR DUFFLE—New members of the Women's Army Auxiliary Corps file from the clothing warehouse at Fort Des Moines, Ia., carrying their issue of uniforms in duffle bags. They are part of the first group of the new WAAC's to report at the fort for their training.

RE-CREATION—Citizens costumed to portray characters of 1827 recreate the discovery of the famous spring at Poland Springs, Me., on the event's 125th anniversary.



SPONGY—Well, it's not very soft. This "spongy" mass is composed of thousands of bits of iron lifted by a magnetic crane from the scrap bin at the Westinghouse East Pittsburgh works. Once tiny drops of molten metal from welding torches, the scrap is collected and salvaged for use again.

WARNS AGAINST HESSIAN FLY

Danger of Wheat Infestation Reported Great Over Entire State.

By The Associated Press

COLUMBUS, O., July 23—Unless Ohio farmers choose wheat planting carefully next fall, they may lose a large part of their crop in 1943, an Ohio State university agriculture expert forecast today.

The Hessian fly menace is more than double that of a year ago and six times as great as in 1940, T. H. Parks reported. Infestation of this year's crip runs as high as 69.4 per cent in Butler county, he added.

The Hessian fly is most prevalent in southwestern counties and least numerous in the northeast section. A six-man check of the 1942 crop showed 50 per cent of wheat straw in Miami and Warren counties containing Hessian fly damage.

Infestation ranged down through 13.6 per cent in Delaware and Crawford counties, 12.2 in Columbiana county, 8.6 in Wayne and 7.8 in Hardin county.

The statewide average this year was 26.5. In 1941, it was 12.4 per cent and in 1940 only 4 per cent. Parks said "anything less than 15 per cent is considered satisfactory."

The Hessian fly attacks the first or second joint of a wheat stalk above the ground and weakens it so the stalk breaks. Eggs laid in the broken joint are washed into the ground to hatch in early autumn.

To prevent fall infestation, plant wheat so that Hessian flies hatch and die without a chance to infect growing wheat, Parks advised. Early seeding enables them to lay eggs in the wheat.

Safe planting dates will be available at county agricultural agents but they will range general from Sept. 22 in northern Ohio to Sept. 30 here and Oct. 4 along the Ohio river, Parks said.

He said he was unable to estimate the dollar loss to Ohio farmers through Hessian flies this year.

MRS. MURDOCK TAKES A CASE

CHAPTER 31

Beyond Their Depth

IT TOOK quite a while to exchange stories with all the accompanying details. Joyce told everything except finding of the man in the closet, but Delia, although she gave all her impressions had very little to add. She had opened the door, and someone — Raeburn, probably — had been waiting behind it.

"He hit you?" Joyce asked.

"He threw something over my head. His coat, I imagine. He must have hit me—there's a little bump on my head and it's sore—but I didn't feel it at the time. I don't remember it anyway. I thought I'd just fainted."

"Of course I'm all right."

Joyce watched her and decided she was. She was glad of this because she had made up her mind. It would be pretty horrid for Delia but it had to be done. She took a breath and stood up. "Come on," she said, and led the way to the other room.

She put Delia in the leather chair but before she could speak the girl gave a quick gasp and pressed her fingers to her mouth as though to stife it.

"But, Joyce . . ." Her eyes were wide and startled now. "It wasn't Raeburn! He's not the one that came last evening. It was another man."

"I know."

"But what does it mean?" What—"

"Wait." Joyce made her voice calm and took out cigarettes. She was deliberately silent until Delia had a light; then she said: "You mustn't let it get you, but I think you'll have to know. There's a dead man in that closet."

"Oh." Quick alarm flicked at Delia's face, but she had rebuilt her forces well and she accepted the announcement with relative calmness. "Oh," she said again, her voice remote.

"And when you're ready," Joyce said, "I think you should look at him and see if he's the one."

"I'm ready now."

Joyce watched the girl stand on her feet. "It's not a pleasant sight."

"I'm all right." She lifted her chin and smiled sardonically. "Really, I think I've been conditioned for most anything now."

"Good girl."

The Same Man

Joyce stepped to the closet and opened the door. She realized then that she, too, had been conditioned. Everything was different now. Before, her nerves had been strained and raw because of her fears for Delia, and terror had struck without warning now she was prepared. There was a job to do and she tried to face it with reasonable objectivity.

The closet, she saw, was large, with rough shelves along either side. On the left these had been filled with stacks of paper-filled manila folders. On the right there were some books and supplies—a quart bottle of ink, boxes of envelopes, packages of paper. At the back of the closet and between the shelves was an old wooden filing cabinet, or rather a section of one, which was perhaps three feet long and eighteen inches high. It was against that the man sat.

His feet were spread, the legs forming a wide V, and although his body sagged in the middle his head was tipped back, the neck resting against the edge of the filing cabinet so that his face had an upward tilt. It was difficult now to imagine what he had been like in life, but to Joyce it seemed that he had been plumpish, not too tall, with a round face and thin brown hair of no particular shade. Above one ear she thought she could see a tiny hole, although she was not sure and would not lean down to find out; the other side of the face was simply one great reddish stain.

"Yes."

Joyce turned, realizing she had been so intent in her own study that she had not heard Delia come up beside her.

"He's the man, I'm sure of it."

Joyce eased Delia away from the doorway, seeing the whiteness around her mouth, but noting with relief the controlled steadfastness of the brown eyes. She closed the door.

"What should we do?" Delia asked.

"I think we should telephone Jack Fenner."

"Oh?"

"Oh?"

"And I think we've got to call the police."

"Joyce!"

"I mean it. Look, darling." She motioned Delia back in the chair and stood in front of her, slim and straight in her checked tweed coat, her hands thrust deep in the pockets, her eyes somber in the shadow of her hat brim. "Here we are, a couple of rankest amateurs trying to figure out a murder all by ourselves, and without getting involved. It doesn't make much sense, does it?"

Asking Fenner

"I suppose it doesn't." Delia said wearily. "Only——"

"I know," Joyce said, "but let's think it out. We've confided in no one, and naturally no one can help us. Neither of us has the faintest idea of who killed Perry Clarke. We've decided it wasn't Ward—not logically, but because we've made up our minds not to admit it. Kent might have helped us but we wouldn't let him; your uncle Dean might have helped. We've even been naive enough to think that we could keep on skirting the edges indefinitely without being caught at it by the police. And now we have two murders on our hands. I think we're getting beyond our depth. I'm also quite sure that you are a lot more involved than you imagine."

"Me?"

"Why do you think Lieutenant Bacon asked you to look at that cigaret case this morning?"

Delia looked puzzled. The hair on the side opposite the part had fallen across the angle of her forehead and she shook it slightly and pushed it back.

"You had a drink with Clarke," Joyce said. "You must have left your fingerprints on that glass. You definitely left them on the cigaret case."

Delia accepted this with resignation. "You knew it," she said. That's why you asked to see it."

"But you see what I mean. They must know by now that you were in Clarke's apartment. You can't deny it and you'll have to tell them something. I believe you could tell the whole story—except the part about seeing Ward's car—without making it any worse for yourself."

Delia thought it over. She looked at Joyce, studying the lines of her face and seeing the direct and steadfast eyes. When Joyce talked like that you had to listen. The quiet good sense of the arguments impressed her and she was reassured.

"All right. Whenever you think is best."

Joyce went to the desk and picked up the telephone.

"I don't say we should tell the police but I think we should be ready if we have to. I think we should ask Jack Fenner and do what he says."

LOVES A MARINE

How do we know a leatherneck has a priority on the heart of Rosaleen Simpson? That's easy. Rosaleen has the insignia of the U. S. Marine Corps painted on her shoulder. Rosaleen is a Walter Thornton model in New York. Latest fad of Miss America who has a boy friend off to the wars is to wear his service insignia painted on arm, leg or shoulder.

PLANE TENDER STORY RELATED

Aleutian Island Correspondent Gives Graphic Description of Cat's Nurse Ship.

[This is] number in a series of [dispatches] by Keith Wheeler, the Chicago Times correspondent in the Aleutian Islands and the first American correspondent to reach [there].

By KEITH WHEELER

(Copyright, 1942, by Chicago Times, Inc.)

ABOARD U. S. SEAPLANE TENDER IN THE ALEUTIANS, (Via Soviet, Delayed)—The wind is [a] 60-knot gale hurling white-caps across the bay, and tonight [no] planes will be in the air—[neither] ours nor the Japanese.

The battle of the Aleutians is not yet over. The Japs are still in Kiska.

But tonight it's all right to relax a little and consider how things have been with his unglamorous little tub and her brood of lumbering PBY Catalina flying boats.

She's a little ship, old and cramped. Once she was a four-piper destroyer but they ripped out half her power plant and used the former firerooms to store extra food, aviation gas, bombs and men. Then they sent her out to nurse the Cats.

Not even her most charitable friend could call her a warship. She's no more a fighting ship than are the 15-ton flying boats she serves. But the war has produced no more valorous chapter than the stubborn fight the Cats and the tender are making against the first invasion of American soil since 1812.

Lay In Dutch Harbor

The little tender lay in Dutch Harbor on June 3, when the Jap raiders paid their first visit.

It was there she received her baptism of fire, and when a zero caught a Cat on the water and burned it up the tender's crew saw the first of her charges destroyed—a heart-breaking sight, to be repeated more than once in the savage days that followed.

(One paragraph censored.)

In the days that followed, the Catalinas flew ceaselessly up and down the island chain in the eternal miasmic fogs. And where the Cats went the tender followed.

Once in her uncharted wanderings I am told she caught a Jap submarine on the surface. She stopped long enough to drop four depth charges and saw the crushed undersea boat rise to the surface, roll over and sink.

(One paragraph censored.)

In time the PBY crews were haggard wrecks and their planes weren't much better. Whenever a plane cracked up in the surf, bleary-eyed repair crews stripped off its usable parts to patch planes shot to tatters by the Japs.

PBY's Based On Tender

At one time quite a few hulking planes were basing on the little tender. Men took two-hour turns in her unmade bunks and then were routed out to fly their reloaded planes to Kiska—making room for other, weary crews. The tender's cooks served meals 24 hours a day. Meantime ran together and sometimes overlapped.

One PBY found itself shadowed by a faster Japanese four-motored seaplane. The Jap showed no disposition to attack and seemed willing to tag along forever. The PBY captain refused to go home and thus lead the enemy to his base. Finally he grew bored with waiting for attack and turned to attack the Jap plane. It ran away.

The time finally came when the tender and her Cats could no longer maintain their precarious location. They loaded the flying boats with the last of the gasoline, took aboard the villagers, two white men, one white woman and a dozen or so Aleuts, burned the village and pulled out.

Now, reprovisioned, refueled and ready for more, they're settled in another base, ready to fight or move without notice.

DELAWARE, O., July 23—Three automobiles were damaged when a tractor-trailer outfit skidded in making a left turn in Delaware yesterday and crashed into the parked cars.

The truck, owned by the Union Cartage Co. of Youngstown, was enroute to Columbus with an eight-ton cargo of steel strip bars.

The truck crashed into the rear of a car owned by Richard Helman of Ashley. Force of the impact drove the car over the curb and crushed the rear. Then the tractor crashed into the rear of an automobile owned by Mrs. John Bandy of near Marysville, and on into a third car.

MEAT SHORTAGE IS WIDESPREAD

Condition Extends Along Eastern Seaboard and as Far West as Ohio.

By The Associated Press

CHICAGO, July 23—Meat eaters discovered today that the war had created a widespread shortage of dressed beef and pork.

Along the eastern seaboard, in some sections of the south, and as far west as Ohio, quality cuts of these meats were hard and sometimes impossible to get.

Some stores in Akron, Ohio, have announced they were out of meat, while six chain stores in the Providence, R. I., area were unable to offer any beef for sale. Warren W. Oley, chief of New Jersey's bureau of markets, said the shortage was acute in the Trenton district and was spreading.

Market experts blamed the pinch on a "squeeze" between uncontrolled livestock prices and the ceiling prices placed on dressed meat, giving as additional causes increases consumer demands, inadequate shipping facilities to some cities, and heavy buying for the armed forces and for lend-lease purposes.

No one seemed to know just how soon the situation would be corrected. Joseph Daram said his big Boston beef firm didn't see "any relief in sight." Some Chicago meat dealers expressed hope that the situation would be eased in a week, while agricultural department officials in Washington said they believed the squeeze would disappear within two months, when hogs and cattle start moving to market in larger numbers.

LEBANON, O., July 23—The Warren county fair has been cancelled because of the war and inability to complete a new grandstand.

REFORMATORY PRISONER SHOT

Slain in Escape Attempt with Another Inmate at Mansfield Early Today.

By The Associated Press

MANSFIELD, O., July 23—A Youngstown prisoner was slain and another was captured early today by Mansfield reformatory guards after a midnight escape, Supt. Arthur Glattke reported.

Dead was Tony Amadio, 21, admitted to the institution July 3, 1941, to serve one to 15 years for burglary and larceny. Acting Coroner L. A. Hautzenroeder of Richland county said Amadio was shot just below the heart by Guard Ray Miller.

Fred Elkins, 22, serving one to 20 years from Jackson county for driving an automobile without the owner's consent, surrendered after his companion was shot, Glattke said. Elkins entered the reformatory two years ago.

Amadio and Elkins were trusties assigned to a milking detail on the reformatory farm.

Glattke said they slipped away about 11:40 a. m. An alarm was sounded and a guard posse began a chase.

Guard Miller and Harry Schroeter sighted the fugitives two hours later along the Erie railroad three miles north of the institution.

The guards said their commands to halt were ignored and Miller fired one revolver shot.

Glattke said Elkins and Amadio had been well-behaved prisoners and had never caused trouble previously.

Ohio Begins Home-Front War Scrap Campaign

By The Associated Press

COLUMBUS, O., July 23—Ohio began a home-front war campaign today to unearth 2,175,000 tons of iron and steel scrap.

Robert O. Welbie, executive secretary of the general salvage division, said 70 per cent of the tonnage would come from industrial plants, railroads, mines, and automobile graveyards.

But individuals will be called upon to help raise the other 650,000 tons—30 pounds per person monthly for the next six months for Ohio's seven million residents.

A rubber globe map of the world has been invented that can be deflated and carried in a pocket, being blown up for use.

BRITISH CAPTURE NEW AXIS WAR MACHINE

This new type of motor-cycle track vehicle was captured from the enemy by the British in Libya. It is used to tow small guns and carry a few men.

STATEMENT ON SALES ISSUED BY M'MILLIN

Mt. Gilead Co. Listed Among Firms Paying Commissions.

Special to The Star

MT. GILEAD, July 23—Howard MacMillin, president of the Hydraulic Press Mfg. Co. at Mt. Gilead, which yesterday was listed as one of the Ohio clients of Shirley, Olcott & Nichols Co. of Washington, one of the "sales engineers" concerns disclosed to have collected or been promised $275,000 by Ohio companies seeking government contracts, today made a statement defending his firm.

According to a news report from Washington, the Hydraulic Co. either paid or owed the Washington "sales engineers" $20,515. The amount was listed in records of the Vinson investigating committee.

Mr. MacMillin said this morning that the Washington company has represented the Hydraulic Co. as a dealer for 10 years, all of which time commissions have been paid. He said the reason commissions are larger now is that the volume of business has increased. Mr. MacMillin said fees never have been excessive and that virtually all the business that comes to the Hydraulic Co. comes through such dealers here and abroad. To have a dealer is a matter of economy, he said, since his company has a half-dozen branch offices but could not afford to have representatives throughout the country. Mr. MacMillin said he knows that the Washington concern has represented other Ohio manufacturers for at least as long as it has represented the Mt. Gilead firm.

The news report also listed the Ohio Locomotive Crane Co. of Bucyrus as having paid or owed the "sales engineers" firm $62,578.

Cripps Implies Britain Plans Impending Action

By The Associated Press

Amid clamor both in Britain and the United States for diversionary action by the Allies, Sir Stafford Cripps, Britain's lord privy seal, implied publicly today that Britain had some impending measure in mind.

But the nature of the supposed plan remained a secret which Sir Stafford gave the British House of Commons to understand the Churchill government would not entrust "even to 615 people"—the membership of the House.

The weather spared Germany from RAF attack during the night but the Germans struck at England in somewhat stronger fashion.

There were casualties and some property damage in the night raids over east Anglia and southern England and the Germans lost one plane. By daylight today a single plane laid a stick of bombs across the shopping center of an east coast town killing a number of civilians, while other raiders were active over other parts of eastern England and the eastern Midlands.

SLAYER OF DAUGHTER DIES IN ELECTRIC CHAIR

Doney Goes To Chair at Columbus Without Word.

By The Associated Press

COLUMBUS, O., July 23—Buffert Ray Doney, 42, of Canton, went to his death in the Ohio penitentiary electric chair last night for slaying his 23-year-old daughter last Nov. 22.

Doney walked into the death chamber at 7:58 p. m. without speaking, moved his lips silently as Rev. C. A. Smith of near Dover repeated a prayer and was pronounced dead 12 minutes later.

His daughter, Mrs. Almeda Whitman, mother of a two-year-old girl, was shot to death with a .22 -caliber revolver on a lonely road in Canton's industrial section after she refused to tell Doney the whereabouts of his estranged wife, Jeanette.

SEDITION

ert Edward Edmondson, of New York and Santa Barbara, Cal.; Ellis O. Jones of Los Angeles; Robert Noble of Los Angeles; James C. True of Washington and Arlington, Va.; Oscar Brumbach of Washington and Luray, Va.; Ralph Townsend of San Francisco, Lake Geneva, Wis., and Washington; William Robert Lyman Jr., alias Robert Lanham, of Detroit; Donald McDaniel of Chicago; Otto Brennermann, known also as Otto Brennemann, of Chicago.

The defendants have been taken into custody in their own localities and all will be brought to Washington for trial, Biddle said.

The defendants include three already under indictment for sedition and four who have been convicted for sedition and two for violating the foreign agents registration act.

Conspiracy Alleged

The indictment alleged that the defendants conspired to urge upon members of the United States armed forces that the United Nations were ineffectual, the United States was safe from attack and that confidence in American public officials was misplaced and unwarranted "for the purpose of obstructing, and designed and intended to impede, obstruct and defeat the preparation of our national defenses against aggression and invasion and the national war effort."

The defendants were charged also with having carried on "a systematic campaign of personal villification and defamation of the public officials of the United States government" in order to convince members of the armed forces that such public officials are traitorous, corrupt, dishonest, incompetent, un-American, and mentally unbalanced."

At the same time, the defendants were alleged to have propagandized the armed forces to show that the Axis powers did not constitute a real danger to the United States, had no intention of threatening the United States, that expansion of the armed forces was unnecessary, and that "American public officials sought to "provoke" war with "peaceful nations," such as Germany, Italy and Japan."

RUSSIA

within hailing distance of Texas, 267,339. The glacier-capped Caucasus mountains, stretching more than 900 miles from Kerch strait to the Caspian sea, range higher than the Alps and outflanking of these natural defenses is obviously one of the Nazi aims.)

The Germans tried to isolate the trans-Caucasus with heavy operations at Tsimlyansk, which is but 25 miles from the only remaining railway linking that area with the rest of unoccupied Russia.

The steel supply line winds south of the Don between Rostov and Stalingrad, connecting enroute with the Rostov-Baku trunk railway at Tikhoretsk. There was no information here as to whether the Germans had crossed the river.

One arm of a pincer movement upon Stalingrad might be aimed northeastward from Tsimlyansk. Forces also might be diverted southwestward to assist in the attack upon Rostov, where the Russians have had almost eight months to rebuild defenses.

The Hitler command said that German and Slovak troops—part of the million-man offensive—had penetrated fortified bridgehead positions in front of Rostov and reached the outskirts of the city.

Since Rostov lies on the north bank of the Don, near the mouth, not shielded by the river, the Germans evidentaly meant that they had crossed a tributary of the Don which curves half around Rostov to join the Don on the east.

This river runs less than 20 miles from Rostov on the north, passing Novocherkassk, 20 miles to the northeast. It was on the river-furrowed plateau at Novocherkassk and at Tsimlyansk, on the north bank of the Don, 130 air line miles northeast of Rostov, that the Russian communique located the direst threats to Rostov and the deeper Caucasus.

The Germans said that a Russian detachment cut off from retreat to Rostov had been smashed and that railways south of the Don estuary as well as Russian transport columns were under destructive night and day assault from the air.

Stalingrad was the potential target of at least three drives, the closest being still short of the Don but near the border of Stalingrad province 80 miles away and astride the Likhaya-Stalingrad railway.

By the bright light of the half-moon Russian bombers and fighters lashed night at the the long columns of German reinforcements moving across the grain-fields of the Don bend, said a Russian dispatch, but they still showed no sign of halting the German sweep.

BILL SIGNED BY PRESIDENT

Approval Given Appropriation Measure Authorizing Sale of Wheat Below Parity.

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, July 23—President Roosevelt signed an appropriation bill today providing $805,000,000 for the agriculture department for the current fiscal year and authorizing sale of government-owned wheat for livestock feed and industrial uses at below parity prices.

Presidential approval climaxed a bitter congressional fight over government wheat sales and money for the farm security administration, the departmental agency charged with operation of programs designed to rehabilitate low income farm families.

During the fight, the House at first insisted on barring sales of wheat at prices below parity, or about $1.35 a bushel. But under stern White House opposition, it finally gave way to a senate proposal allowing the sale of up to 125,000,000 bushels of surplus wheat at 85 per cent of corn parity, or about 83 cents a bushel. (Parity is a price estimated to give farmers the same relative purchasing power they enjoyed in a base period, usually 1909-14.)

Signing of the bill by Mr. Roosevelt cleared the way for movement of millions of bushels of this wheat from heavy producing areas into livestock feeding areas where it is needed to supplement corn and other feedstuffs.

In demanding the right to sell government wheat at sub-parity levels, the administration said the grain was needed as feed to encourage farmers to produce a maximum quantity of meat, dairy and poultry products for United Nations war needs. It said farmers would not buy the wheat for feed unless it was as cheap as corn.

U. S. NAVAL UNIT SAW ACTION WITH ENEMY

Admiral Giffen Reports Activity of Task Force.

By The Associated Press

LONDON, July 23—Rear Admiral Robert C. Giffin, commander of a U. S. naval task force with the British fleet, disclosed today the force had been in action against enemy aircraft.

Admiral Giffin described the operations as "just the usual thing."

Units of the American force have had flurries with planes but so far have not brushed with enemy naval craft, he said, adding that no severe damage has been suffered.

"Everything is all right so far," he said.

The American fleet units were operating "in the north—against polar bears or something," before the United States entered the war, Admiral Giffen disclosed.

Official arrival of the task force was on Easter Sunday morning, April 5.

Morale of the men in the force is fine and "the kids love their jobs," he declared. Some of them are due in London soon for their first leave in more than a year.

Writer Discusses Jap Invasion of Aleutian Islands

By DEWITT MacKENZIE
Wide World War Analyst

Public concern over the continued Japanese occupation of Aleutian Islands appears to have mounted rapidly during the past few days, and increasingly one hears the question of just why it is that the invaders of American soil haven't been evicted.

Representative Coffee of Washington added fuel to the fire yesterday when he demanded that forces be sent to oust the Japs immediately. And Alaskan Delegate Dimond, who has complained that we are being too complacent in this matter, says he has received reports that between 20,000 and 25,000 Japanese troops have been landed in the Aleutians already.

This growing anxiety undoubtedly has been stimulated by the knowledge that the Nipponese occupation of Aleutian bases not only threatens Alaska but is intimately connected with the possibility of an attack against Russian Siberia at this crucial time when the Reds are fighting for their lives (and ours) at the gateway to the Caucasus.

Would Bring Attack

A collapse of the Bolshevist defenses in the present fierce battle might inspire the Japs to repeat their favored trick of striking without warning. The Aleutians of course lie close to Russian soil and cut across our line of communication with our ally.

There certainly is an answer to the continued presence of the enemy on the three westernmost islands of Attu, Kiska and Agattu, but I doubt if it is what the reader would expect. One well known reason is that the weather over the Aleutians is about as filthy as you can find, and it has been bad lately. Dense fogs have shielded the Japs from air or sea attacks.

However, I believe that a more vital reason why we haven't taken stronger action is that we simply haven't had the naval force to spare.

That may seem like strong mustard, but the position is quite understandable. The ousting of the Japs is essentially a naval task.

The navy can't be expected to undertake such a mission with a handful of ships; the job calls for a very considerable force. Thus far we haven't been able (or so I believe) to mass enough ships for the operation. Still, that shouldn't cause public surprise. We possess the ships all right, but they are spread out over the seven seas, performing mighty tasks to keep the wheels of the allied war machine turning.

Danger Less Here

And why don't we call in some of these ships and clean out the Aleutians? Presumably because the authorities, fully aware of the danger of the Jap occupation, realize that danger is less pressing than other perils which have to be met.

The threat from the Japanese occupation has increased since they first scrambled onto one of the barren isles. But there has been no confirmation, however, of the report that 25,000 of the enemy have been landed. That figure seems far too large, for the simple reason that it would require a much bigger operation than the Nipponese appear to have performed to install and supply so many men.

It's safe to say, though, that the Japs are busy consolidating their small holdings—laying out air-fields and so on. They will have to be wiped out as soon as possible, and without doubt this will be done. Meanwhile our airmen are keeping them hammered down where they belong among the rocks.

Wins Medal

By The Associated Press

MELBOURNE — Private John C. Boggs, Point Peter, Ga., has been awarded a safe-driving medal for driving 5,000 miles in Australia without an accident.

The contest was started several weeks ago to reduce the number of automobile accidents. It was open to all army transport drivers, including Australians.

Boggs' award was entered in his service record. He was also given three days' leave.

CASE REOPENED WITH ARREST OF SUSPECT

Investigation Resumed in Old State Hospital Slaying.

By The Associated Press

ATHENS, O., July 23—The arrest of Charles F. Bobo, 61, of Logan resulted today in reopening an investigation of the almost forgotten slaying of a patient in the state hospital here.

Bobo pleaded innocent yesterday to second degree murder in the fatal beating Feb. 5, 1907, of William J. Barnes, a patient in the hospital where Bobo then was an attendant. Bobo was unable to make $1,000 bond and was held in jail.

Sheriff George Bateman reopened the investigation, he said, after Henry Robinette of MacArthur, a half brother of the slain man, filed an affidavit accusing Bobo.

The sheriff said he arrested Bobo in Lancaster and that Bobo told him this story of the case:

He did not know of his indictment with two other hospital attendants in the slaying although he had lived at Logan for the last 27 years.

Told he might be called as a witness in the case, Bobo asked a friend to keep him informed on developments and went to Detroit shortly after the slaying. The friend wrote he was not needed in the case.

Returning to Logan, he made no effort to hide his identity.

The other attendants were Hobart Reeder and Henry Harkins. Reeder was convicted of manslaughter and sentenced to three years in Ohio penitentiary. Records on the disposition of Harkins case have not been found. The indictment against Bobo was nolled in 1911.

FEWER VOTERS ELIGIBLE HERE

15,000 Registered To Cast Ballots in August Primary, Ritzler Reports.

Despite Marion's increased population in recent months, due to war building projects, there are fewer city voters registered for the Aug. 11 primary than there were a year ago.

There are approximately 15,000 residents of Marion city who are eligible to cast their ballot in the coming primary.

C. G. Ritzler, deputy clerk of the board of elections, said yesterday that the number is "not quite as many" as last year.

He attributed the drop to the fact that the number of new registrations did not equal the number of deaths, removals and marriage of women who did not change their registrations, and to the fact that the first of the year the board removed from the poll books the names of some 1,300 men and women who had not voted for two years. Election laws require that to keep the suffrage privilege without registering, a voter must cast a ballot within a two-year period.

Only 16 absent voters ballots have been cast to date and "very, very few" men in the service have voted, according to Mr. Ritzler.

The question of whether Marion's trailer residents may vote in the primary has not been decided. Mr. Ritzler said he had not yet received an opinion from the attorney general, sought weeks ago, and that until an opinion was forthcoming he would have to abide by an opinion of 1916 that persons living in trailers can not vote.

There will be only one levy on the August primary ballots in Marion county.

A two-year levy outside the 10-mill limitation is being sought by the Scott township board of education for operating expenses. The levy, "not exceeding five mills for each $1 of valuation," was acted on by the board on June 8.

JAPS TO SEEK NEW COUNTRIES

Keep Eye on Latin America for Infiltration Methods After War.

SAN FRANCISCO—The Japanese may attempt to get a foothold on the South American continent after the war through infiltration in the belief of R. C. Hurlbut, Latin-American expert for the San Francisco Chamber of Commerce.

"Quiet infiltration into countries where future conquests have been scheduled is part of Japan's plan of procedure," Hurlbut said. "To enter a country, accept its hospitality, live amongst its native population in apparent friendship and goodwill and eventually betray, murder and enslave the native population is the order of the day in any Latin American country where the Japanese can get a foothold.

"Latin America must look forward to many such invasions by the Japanese even after the Japs have been defeated in the present war.

"However, even the smallest of our brother republics are well aware of the methods used by the Japanese and will take full precautions to see to it that no one enters their country by infiltration with the intention of conquest.

"Japan would like very much to acquire, for example, such a nice country as El Salvador with its intensive cultivation and rich resources.

"Peru may reasonably expect considerable trouble in the future with the Japanese who have settled in that country. Peru will handle that situation with ease when the propitious moment arrives for the expulsion of the grinning would-be conquerors.

"Brazil is another rich and immense area which, if conquered by the Axis powers, would prove to be a keystone in world domination. But so far as Japanese infiltration is concerned both the Brazilian and the United States governments are aware of the plot and will take proper steps to prevent it."

Hurlbut declared that under no circumstances should the Japanese be allowed to settle in any of the Central American countries, which he said are specially desirable to the Japs.

"In the meantime," he concluded, "do not be surprised if some fighting takes place in Brazil in order to oust the many thousands of Japanese who have entered the country by 'peaceful means'."

Ohio Hungarian Immigrants Booked for Farming Broadcast to Europe

ON THE FARM PRODUCTION FRONT, (Wide World) — Two Hungarian immigrants—one a former Hungarian soldier—are going to bat for Uncle Sam, via short wave radio to Europe.

Julius Ragalyi of Trumbull county, Ohio, and Joe Vargo of Mahoning county, Ohio in the next few weeks will broadcast for their first time and will tell their erstwhile European neighbors of tremendous strides being made by the American farmers to produce the food that will "win the war and write the peace."

Ragalyi and Vargo will recount their experiences as "free men in a free land" on transcriptions to be made at station WGAR, Cleveland, under direction of representatives of the office of war information. The transcriptions will be distributed from Washington to various short-wave stations throughout the nation for broadcast to middle Europe.

As a Hungarian soldier in the first World war, Ragalyi saw action against Italian armies near Monte Grapo, along the Swiss-French frontier. The shrapnel scars he carries are mementoes of that conflict.

"This time," says Ragalyi, "I'm fighting on the right side. When America wins this war the freedom and liberty I have enjoyed will belong also to my friends and relatives in Hungary, and to all the peoples in the old country."

Father of three children, he supports his aged mother and father from production on his 80 acres of rolling Trumbull county farmland. (His brother, who lives on an adjacent farm, is also an immigrant). Julius Ragalyi is proud of the fact that he has increased his milk production from 13 cows—more than 40 gallons a day—in response to his adopted land's plea for greater daily production.

His co-broadcaster will be Vargo, who, at 61, says he's rarin' to fight the Axis. With great pride, Vargo states:

"My son, Joe, he's in the American army. And by golly, I do my part, too, by growing plenty of good food for him and all our soldier boys to eat."

Vargo's farm of 133 acres lies not far from the smoking war factories of Youngstown. Once this farm was worked by a crew, including the elder Vargo, son Joe, and a hired hand. Today, with constant demands for increased farm production, Vargo and his wife, Katalin, do all the work themselves. The hired man left for a higher-paying job in industry.

Pilot and Gunner of Navy Bomber Credited with Downing 7 Jap Zeros

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, July 23 — A United States navy dive bomber type of plane ordinarily given little chance to defend itself against the enemy's fighters—was credited by the navy today with shooting down seven Japanese fighters on two successive days of action in the battle of the Coral Sea.

The plane was piloted by Lieutenant (junior grade) John A. Leppla, 26, of rural route No. 6, Lima, O., and John Liska, 19, aviation radioman, third class, Van Nuys, Los Angeles, Calif., was the rear gunner.

The dive bomber flown by Leppla was one of a squadron based on the American aircraft carrier Lexington, which was fatally torpedoed.

The story of how Leppla and Liska made their record in the two days of fighting so that their plane is now decorated with seven tiny Japanese flags was released by the navy in the words of Liska who has just returned to this country.

"Our scouting squadron took off from the Lexington on May 7 on what I thought at the time was a routine patrol flight," Liska said. "Not long after leaving the ship I received contact reports on the radio and then we sighted the Japanese fleet and a Jap carrier a few miles behind the fleet.

Peeled for Attack

"Our planes started peeling off for the attack, and the Jap ships scattered. The carrier was the main target, and I could see several near misses splash in the water close to her. As Lieutenant Leppla pulled out of his dive I looked back and saw that our bomb had landed close off the carrier's port quarter.

"All the while the Jap ships were sending up a terrific amount of anti-aircraft fire, and there was a squadron of Jap Zero fighters on our tail. They followed us all the way down in the dive. We levelled off and turned loose a large bomb at a cruiser, but by that time the Zeros were on us and I was a little too busy to see whether we hit it.

"There were two Zeros on our tail and every time they came in I gave them a burst. My gun jammed momentarily and when it was fixed I found that there was only one Zero behind us. Lieutenant Leppla saw the first Zero crash in the water, so I suppose I got him. As we pulled up a Zero crossed our path and Lieutenant Leppla let him have a burst and that was one less Jap to worry about.

"I fired a burst into another Zero—the tracers were plainly visible, and on looking up again the Zero had disappeared. Perhaps the pilot was wounded for I could see no other reason for him to quit the fight. We then reformed and our planes started back toward the Lexington."

On Patrol Again

Next day the Japs attacked the Lexington and Liska related that he and Leppla were out on patrol at the time.

"Soon we sighted our planes," he said, "and right after joining them we hit the Japs. From then on things were happening too fast for me to remember just what occurred. It was the biggest melee I've ever seen with planes all over the sky. I have mental pictures of several Jap planes crashing into the sea, and one of our planes crashing. In between bursts from my gun I heard Lieutenant Leppla's guns spitting.

"After getting back to the ship and totalling the scores I found that our plane received credit for seven planes in the two days. Lieutenant Leppla shot down four of those, so I must have gotten the other three.

"It certainly is good to be back in the United States, but we're all anxious to get out and have another crack at the Japs."

Liska is a native of Coaldale, Pa. He has been in the regular navy since February, 1941. Leppla, a former student at Purdue university, is a member of the naval reserve and the son of George W. Leppla of R. R. No. 6, Lima, O. Leppla won the navy cross for heroism in the American air attack on the Japanese at Lae and Salamaua, March 10.

By The Associated Press

All the people who for weeks devoted themselves to trying to solve the slump of the New York Yankees probably are busy now figuring out reasons for the sliding of the Boston Red Sox and the Detroit Tigers

This is a thankless task, but nevertheless a form of endeavor in which there never is any unemployment. Somebody always is in a slump and right now both the Red Sox and the Tigers have it bad Boston has lost four in a row and nine of its last 11 games Detroit has dropped 11 out of 14 and has fallen from the first division

Boston Shut Out

The Red Sox were shut out 2-0 yesterday by Lee Ross of the Chicago White Sox who allowed five hits

The Tigers were tamed 2-1 by the Washington Senators on the five-hit hurling of Sid Hudson.

The St Louis Browns blew a 6-0 lead attained in the first four frames and lost an 11-8 decision to the Philadelphia Athletics

Idle today, the Cincinnati Reds stood a chance of losing to New York the third-place position they took from the Giants more than six weeks ago.

The Giants, who play Pittsburgh today, were idle yesterday but went into a tie with the Reds who lost to Brooklyn 5-1

13th Over Reds

The victory was the Dodgers' 13th in 18 starts against the Reds, and marked the fourth straight loss for Ray Starr.

Kirby Higbe, winning his 10th of the year and his first against Cincinnati, held the Redlegs to five hits and a lone consolation tally in the eighth on Lonnie Frey's triple and Gee Walker's single.

Three doubles were the key blows in Brooklyn scoring. Ducky Medwick doubled in the first behind a walk for a run; Dolph Camilli drove in two in the fourth inning after two singles; and Higbe's double in the sixth after a pair of singles chased in the final two.

The St. Louis Cardinals slammed out a 7-0 victory over the Philadelphia Phils, who were unable to score on 10 hits off Johnny Beazley.

The Chicago Cubs evened their score with the Boston Braves in the day's other game as Claude Passeau pitched a masterful two-hitter for a 2-1 verdict over Paul Derringer's 14th triumph of the year

Jack Stephenson Is Still Sixth Among Tackles in All-Star Poll.

By LOREN W. TIBBALS
Marion Star Sports Editor

JUST between you and I and the next door neighbor, Jack Stephenson is a dead cinch to make the ninth annual college all-star football squad which will face the world champion Chicago Bears in Soldiers' Field, Chicago, the night of Aug. 28.

Now this doesn't mean that drive workers should cease to obtain votes, but it merely is a prediction based on the current flow of votes favoring the giant 1941 Ohio State university grid captain.

During the first four days of this week Stevie has polled more than 15,000 votes each day and has risen from eighth place to sixth place. He trails Jim Daniell, another great Ohio State tackle, by only 7,128 votes. At the present rate Jack will be in fourth place with over 125,000 votes when the balloting ends midnight, Sunday.

In order to keep Jack high in the standings, Marion residents are requested by local drive sponsors to make a final effort to sign one of the many petitions being circulated in the mercantile, residential and industrial areas

A thorough canvass of all local industrial plants was begun yesterday and present indications point to a 100 per cent participation by officials in all plants contacted.

While several of the players who were near the top early in the campaign have slipped to lower positions, Stephenson has maintained a consistent vote. Never

STILL SIXTH

Jack Stephenson is still in sixth place today among 35 tackles competing for college all-star football berths. Up to midnight last night, the widely-known Buckeye tackle had received 81,544 votes. Al Blozis (Georgetown) tops all other tackles with 117,294 votes Urban Odson (Minnesota), Paul Lillis (Notre Dame), Alf Bauman (Northwestern) and Jim Daniell (Ohio State) all have over 80,000 votes.

TAM O' SHANTER GOLF TOURNEY BAFFLES PLAYERS, SPECTATORS

Open and Amateur Events Mixed Up; See If You Can Dope It Out.

By The Associated Press

CHICAGO, July 23—Without much doubt the most confused golf tournament in history, the Tam O'Shanter open and amateur unlimited, proceeded today into its fourth or completely unintelligible stage—the one just before they bring out the padded wagon and say, "Take it easy, pal, sure you're Napoleon."

On today's program, as someone explained it, was the first 18 holes of the Tam O'Shanter $15,000 medal play open. Also scheduled were two rounds of match play in the All-American amateur championship, these being the third and fourth rounds of this particular championship. The man who explained this disappeared before his name was obtained, but his version may be taken as fairly authentic.

George S. May, president of the Tam O'Shanter club and the man who brought up all the strange events, said that was his general understanding of the situation, too

Looking back somewhat dazedly upon everything that happened yesterday at Tam O'Shanter, there's only one thing you can be sure of—there was lots and lots of golf.

The amateurs battled each other all over the layout for 11 solid hours and a couple of hundred professional took qualifying swings.

Today, 136 professionals began battling for $2,500 first money in the 72-hole open championship. The 16 surviving amateurs from yesterday's shambles tied up in two match play rounds, while at the same time competing in the open. All of the amateurs who were eliminated yesterday—48 of 'em—continued to compete in the open.

Marion Hawks Lose To Fostoria Red Flares, 12-5

The Marion Hawks dropped a 12-5 Ohio State semi-pro league decision to the Fostoria Red Flares at Lincoln park last night. It was the Hawks' second loss in second round competition, having lost once previously to the Galion team.

Sunday the Hawks will go to Fostoria for a return game with the Red Flares.

Plans for a benefit game with the Galion team Friday, July 30, are now being completed by officials of the Marion club. Proceeds from the game will be used to pay doctor and hospital bills contracted when Fritz Walters, the Hawks' flashy shortstop, was injured in a recent Marion-Galion game.

Milnar Holds New Yorkers But Cleveland Errors Give Away Game.

By The Associated Press

CLEVELAND, O., July 23 — Chubby Dean was picked today to test his skill in answering that all - important American league question—Who can stop the Yankees?

Al Milnar did a noble job of holding the New Yorkers in check yesterday, but two Indian errors in the tenth inning enabled the Bronx Bombers to push across four runs and capture the game, 5 to 1, for their 11th straight victory.

Joe Stopped

While Milnar's loss was a heart-breaker for the Tribe, the locally-bred southpaw halted Joe DiMaggio's string of consecutive games in which he had hit safely. Joe, seeking No. 19, collected two outfield flies, an infield pop-up, and a walk, and was hit on the foot by a pitched ball

It was the second time Joltin' Joe had a slugging streak terminated here His record, punching out a hit in 56 games in a row ended here when Al Smith and Jim Bagby halted him during a night contest at the stadium on July 17 last year.

Rollie Hemsley caught the whole game for the Yankees last night, collecting four hits in five chances

Charlie Keller opened the scoring with a home run in the second session, but the Indians tied it up in the seventh inning when Les Fleming singled Keltner home

Grimes at Short

Oscar Grimes, who had played every other infield position for the Indians during the year, had his first chance at shortstop when he replaced Peters in the ninth inning After two were out in the tenth, Tommy Henrich singled and DiMaggio got his walk. Then Grimes drew two errors when he fumbled Joe Gordon's grounder and followed a quick recovery by throwing wildly at the plate as Henrich scored

That was enough for the Yanks to win, but Keller was passed to fill the bases and Phil Rizzuto singled to drive in two more tallies. Hemsley plated Keller with his second double of the day, and the scoring ended.

Madsen and Kalimkoff Will Oppose Billings and Steele in Tag Team Match Tonight

Promoter Les Fishbaugh Signs Jack Bloomfield To Meet Billy Venerable in 30-Minute Preliminary Bout.

Axel Madsen, lanky Danish star, and Ivan Kalimkoff of Russia will go against Nick Billings of Athens, Greece, and Jackie Steele of Centerville, Ia., in the main-go attraction

The first two men are established favorites with local fans while the second pair are also popular with more than a majority of the customers.

Because of this decided preference in performers, local fans are in store for a really great program

Until recently Nick Billings was undefeated on the Armory mats. The Swedish Angel, making his second appearance here in three years, easily downed Billings to end the long victory streak

At present Kalimkoff often referred to as the Mad Russian is the only unbeaten fighter appearing locally in cards promoted by Les Fishbaugh He has downed all of the better wrestlers and is beginning to break into some of the bigger fight cities. He recently appeared in a series of main-go attractions in Toledo and was a great favorite there

Madsen, who made his return to the local ring a few weeks ago after an absence of nearly a year is steadily gaining the spotlight. Appearing in a battle royal last week he came up with a draw against the highly-favored Billings

Jackie Steele does not need an introduction here. Over a period of several years he has appeared here and has constantly maintained better than a .500 percentage

Meeting in the 30-minute preliminary slated to get underway at 8:30 are Jack Bloomfield of New York City and Billy Venerable, Dallas, Tex., flash. Both have made previous appearances here however Bloomfield has not fought in the Armory ring for about three months.

BIVINS FAVORED TO WIN FROM MUSCATO

To Trade Punches at Cleveland Tonight.

By The Associated Press

CLEVELAND, July 23 — The odds two to two that Jimmy Bivins of Cleveland will beat Joe Muscato of Buffalo, but if either gets his two chances lands on the chin the pay-off will be there.

The experts' verdict as Bivins reached razor-edge condition for their 10-round, light-heavyweight leather-throwing session at Cleveland arena tonight.

Bivins puts every one of his punches into climax punches, one of which kayoed Lem Franklin in the first frame of their fight here last month. Bivins stopped Davis in nine rounds a while back, but since then Franklin has been bouncing off the canvas and Bivins has been improving rapidly.

BLUES TO MEET A. A. ALL-STARS TONIGHT

Red Bird Hurlers To Face League-Leaders.

By The Associated Press

KANSAS CITY, July 23—The Kansas City Blues oppose an American association all-star baseball team for the third time tonight in a game scheduled to add more than $15,000 to the army and navy relief funds.

For the Blues, a New York Yankee subsidiary, the contest offers an opportunity to avenge two beatings at the hands of the league's best athletes. In 1939 Kansas City suffered a particularly humiliating, 19 to 7 drubbing, and the following season the stars drove big Ernie Bonham to the showers in notching a 5 to 3 win.

Bill Burwell, Louisville manager who is handling the all-star aggregation nominated George Munger, the Columbus righthander, to start, but four other highly regarded hurlers are ready to take over anytime the giant red-head weakens. It was likely that the Blue pilot, Johnny Neun, would counter with Lefty Johnnie Johnson, although he might switch to Francis Shea or Ray Volpi, both righthanders.

Colby Hanover strengthened his rating as Hambletonian favorite by capturing two of three heats of yesterday's National stake for three-year-old trotters from several of the strongest contenders he will meet in the August classic.

DULL GRAIN SALES RULE IN PITS TODAY

By The Associated Press
CHICAGO, July 23—Dullness was the outstanding feature of the grain pits today.
In the lightest trading in some weeks, prices held within a narrow range. Wheat was off fractionally most of the session, more from a lack of buying interest than any pressing demand to sell, and corn was virtually unchanged from the preceding session's close.
The fact that this is the final day for trading in July contracts may have tended to keep dealings at a minimum, grain men said.

Shipbuilding Program Will Cause Dislocation
By The Associated Press
CLEVELAND, July 23 — The nation's shipbuilding program will bring an extensive employment dislocation in Ohio, Kentucky, West Virginia and western Pennsylvania, John C. Virden, WPB director for this region, declared today.
A large percentage of steel will be diverted from other products and used for ships, Virden said. Plants which depend on steel must face possible shortages of material and as dislocations occur, there will be idle machines, temporary idle capital and idle labor, but he added:
"It is hoped that through the war manpower commission and the war production board these periods of idleness will be held to a minimum."

BRIEF MARKET SPURT FAILS

Steel Selling Resumes After Opening Lag; Market Generally Down.

By The Associated Press
NEW YORK, July 23 — The stock market generally turned downward today after a feeble recovery attempt failed to get anywhere.
Selling of steels dried up at the start but was resumed later. Initial comebacks of minor fractions were subsequently cancelled in many cases and declines of fractions to a point or so were the rule.
The administration move for a much bigger tax bill, confusing war news and the thought that strong inflation controls might be in the offing restrained buyers. A bolstering influence, though, was the belief that many bearish developments may have been pretty well discounted.
Among stocks U. S. Steel, Bethlehem and Republic slipped after getting early support. Losers included American Telephone, N. Y. Central, Westinghouse, American Can, U. S. Rubber, Du Pont and Sears Roebuck.
In the matter of the steels it was felt that while future returns to shareholders might have to undergo considerable revision because of mounting federal imposts and other costs, some commentators suggested that nearby drastic cuts in dividends were unlikely.
Market analysis saw a hopeful indicator in the Dun & Bradstreet survey estimating bank clearings in 23 cities for the week ended July 23 were the largest since the week of March 18 and exceeded the comparable 1941 week by 14.3 per cent.
Holders of building material shares noted the summary of the Engineering News-Record heavy construction awards in the week concluded Tuesday were off 15 per cent from the previous week and 26 per cent under the like week a year ago.

PRESIDENT STUDIES NEW CURBS ON INFLATION

Seeks Advice From Management And Labor.

By The Associated Press
WASHINGTON, July 23—President Roosevelt carefully canvassed his wartime powers and sought advice from both labor and management today in an effort to learn whether additional, urgent curbs on inflation could be imposed speedily without new legislation.
It was reported that he had arranged conferences with Attorney General Biddle to study steps he might take independently to control rising costs of living under authority of the two war powers acts and the basic price control law, as well as his authority as the nation's commander-in-chief.
It was learned the President had arranged a conference during the day with representatives of the United States Chamber of Commerce, the National Association of Manufacturers and the labor war cabinet, which includes AFL and CIO leaders.

EDEN SKETCHES OUTLINES OF AFTER-WAR POLICY

Proclaims Three Urgent Problems of Post-War Period.

By The Associated Press
NOTTINGHAM, ENGLAND, July 23—Sketching the outlines of the future peace at one of the gravest hours of the war, Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden said today that Britain is ready to meet and work with the United States in shaping the post-war world.
In a speech which was generally regarded as the most definite pronouncement of Britain's after-war policy that has yet been made by a British statesman, Eden said:
"With the United States, and other nations, we shall take our part in working for the development of a great world-wide civilization." He named three urgent problems of peace:
1. Complete disarmament of the aggressor powers.
2. Feeding of the starving populations.
3. Enabling the devastated, impoverished and economically undeveloped countries to restart their industry and agriculture.

Soldiers Are Tough, If They Finish This Test

CAMP EDWARDS, Mass. — America's soldiers are going to be in top-notch shape before they meet the enemy. Here's the way the army is conditioning them here:
The soldier grabs his rifle and 30-pound pack and marches to the 1,542-foot obstacle course. In 3½ minutes he must:
Take off with yell, mount an eight-foot wall, slide down a 10-foot pole, leap a flaming trench, weave through a series of pickets, crawl through a water main, climb a 10-foot rope, clamber over a five-foot fence, swing by rope across a seven-foot ditch, mount a 12-foot ladder and descend on the other side, charge over a four-foot breastwork, walk a 30-foot catwalk some 12 feet with nothing seven feet over the ground, pull hand-over-hand along a 30-foot horizontal ladder, climb another fence, climb another and cross the finish line of a quarter.

Thief Reimburses Victim for Loot Taken 4 Years Ago

Someone's conscience is clearer today for having made restitution to a former Marion stenographer from whom $5 and a coin purse were stolen about four years ago.
It was in the spring, about four years ago that gasoline seeping from a drum trickled down South Prospect street, between Church and Center streets, became ignited and did considerable damage to cars parked along the curb.
The unusual fire attracted many people, including Carter M. Patton, attorney, and his secretary, Miss Maxine Boner, who left the law office to watch the efforts to extinguish the fire.
When they returned Miss Boner found that someone had taken a coin purse with $5 from her pocketbook. Eventually the incident was forgotten.
This week an unsigned letter with a $5 bill and a $1 bill came to Mr. Patton. It requested that the money be given to the young woman from whose purse the $5 was taken and explained that the $1 was to pay for the coin purse.
Whether the writer was a man or woman was not stated, but the one-time petty thief admitted to having gotten religion.
Mr. Patton has arranged to forward the $6 to Miss Boner, who is now employed in the Motorists Automobile Mutual Insurance office in Columbus.

Treating Constipation

It will be evident from reading the two preceding articles this week that here is no single method of treating chronic constipation. The greatest difficulty in most cases is persuading people that the condition is not doing them any harm. In this connection the relatives can cause as much trouble as anything else.

I have heard the story of a woman who came to a doctor for constipation which he found was not causing her any distress and he asked her why she was wasting her time and money in his office. Her answer was that she hadn't wanted to come but her mother and sister had upbraided her so much that she had come in self-defense. So the physician wrote her out the following certificate:

"To whom it may concern: Miss Blank is to be permitted to be constipated as long as she pleases."

This delighted the patient and she had it framed and put on the bathroom wall where her mother and sister could see it every day.

Two other important things to get over are the fear of auto-intoxication and the habit of taking cathartics. They both have the same origin—fear—and this is kept aflame by suggestions such as institutes that give "internal baths" and pictures of sufferers who get up with a terrible headache in the morning "before" and then jump around and race to the office, full of vim and vigor "after" getting the auto-intoxication cured.

In my experience enemas are often more dangerous than cathartics. I have seen a number of patients with the enema habit who had managed to infect the mucosa of the bowel so that they were really sick. As to colonic flushings, it is a literal fact that the high enema never gets the entire colon cleaned out—in fact it never gets much further than the first twelve inches.

The ingenuity of many thousands of members of the human race has been used in trying to get a colon tube that will get past the sigmoid colon; the farthest that anyone has gotten is twelve inches. The rest of them simply curl up in the first few inches.

Non-Irritant Cathartic

If a cathartic is to be taken, the safest is liquid petrolatum. It has no irritating qualities such as salines and the vegetable cathartics, such as aloes. It actually produces peristaltic movements and does not produce a habit because tolerance is not formed. The only objection to the use of liquid petrolatum is that it prevents the absorption of some of the vitamins.

Curtis and Horton, of the University of Michigan, have shown that amounts of liquid petrolatum as small as 15 to 30 c.c. are able to remove all the carotene from a normal diet if the oil comes into contact with food containing carotene. Even this objection, however, is not serious if the drug is used only once or twice a week.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

L. E.:—Please tell me whether or not a fibrous tumor is or ever can be cancerous.

Answer: Any tumor, or in fact any tissue can turn into any other kind of tissue, including cancerous tissue, but strictly speaking a fibrous tumor remains a fibrous tumor. Change from a fibrous tumor to cancer is quite rare. The only thing that need concern you is whether the diagnosis of fibrous tumor is correct.

N. C.:—Are certain foods the cause of high blood pressure? If so, what are some of the foods? Will high blood pressure be cured if one stops eating these foods?

Answer: In my opinion foods do not have anything to do with the cause of high blood pressure nor will any particular diet cure or influence high blood pressure.

Pitfalls of Love

By ADELE GARRISON

SOMETHING outside of my own knowledge, an intuition I had had for several days, backed my answer to Katharine's question.

"Yes, I'm sure he is safe," I said, although I could give her no proof further than what my father had just told her.

Certainly the astute Chief would not permit a person so vital as Jack to the government's safety, to disappear and run into danger without keeping informed of his whereabouts and safeguarding them that information.

"Look here, Katrina!" I said, purposely using the name Lillian, Dicky and I often substitute for her more stately cognomen, "as I told you, this is going to be a long story, and a good deal of the time you're going to be so angry at me that I'm going to hold on to my hair to keep it from being pulled out."

When I saw the wraith of a smile quirk her lips, I knew that she was rapidly losing her nerve-racking anxiety.

"Your hair will be safe," she said affectionately, "but tell me first who forged that letter."

"Presently, presently," I said, "but first I have to tell you something more important than that."

Tells of Seeing Jack

"Within the week I have seen Jack myself, Katharine, and have talked with him. He is well, and seems to have recovered completely from his old—inhibitions, shall I say? He loves you as much as he ever did — more in fact—and if he comes out of his present enterprise alive, his only thought is to make up to you for what you have suffered through him."

"Yet he has chosen not to write a word of that to me!" she burst out bitterly.

"But he has," I told her swiftly. "He has written you regularly all these years, diary notes every day, sent out in batches whenever the mails went out. He was as astonished as you are now to find out that you had received nothing from him.

"Neither has he received any letter from you in all that time. I told him how regularly you had written to him—but to his credit he did not believe the explanation of your silence given to him by the person who, my father and I believe, forged that letter to you."

She sat erect in her chair, and her eyes were hard.

"You mean Ruth Hayes, that 'wilderness woman'," she said, and there was venom in her voice.

"None other," I said. "And Katharine—I never have known Jack to lie to me, and to me, who know him so well, he could not camouflage his feelings. When I told him of that lying letter Ruth Hayes had written to you, his anger was something terrible.

"He told me then that he had never had any other feeling toward her than gratitude for the comfortable home she had made for her brother and himself in the wilderness, but even that had turned to aversion when she told him that story of your going to Hal Meredith in the hospital, with its implication that you meant to divorce him and marry Hal."

Watching her furtively, I wondered if she would let slip any indication of the secret hidden so deep in her heart—that of her real feelings toward her husband and toward Hal Meredith. I wanted desperately to know whether love or a high sense of wifely duty was actuating her in her present ordeal.

But I got no clue in her answer. She made an exclamation which put into words what might be the normal reaction of anyone to my revelation.

The Stars Say—

For Friday, July 24

Rather anxious and difficult situations are likely to develop on this day, according to the lunar aspects. With sound conservatism as well as some straight thinking these adverse circumstances may be successfully and happily composed. A brilliant idea or the introduction of an amiable, friendly and generous impulse may accomplish much rather than a subtle or direct gesture.

Those whose birthday it is may convert menacing or uncertain situations into successful issues by clever, shrewd and sagacious management and friendly approach rather than subtlety and finesse. It is possible than an elderly person or an old institution may prove a helpful intermediary.

A child born on this day should be fairly successful by its cleverness, stability and sincerity. Its friends will be found among the elderly from whom should come benefits.

WRITER TELLS OF 3,000-MILE ALEUTIAN TRIP

Alaska Correspondent Continues Story of Heroic Defense Against Japs.

This is another in a series of stories by Keith Wheeler, the Chicago Times correspondent in the Aleutian Islands. Wheeler, first accredited correspondent to reach Alaska, is attached to the U. S. fleet. He arrived in Alaska shortly after the Japanese attack on Dutch Harbor June 3.

By KEITH WHEELER

(Copyright, 1942, by Chicago Times, Inc.)

SOMEWHERE IN ALASKA—(Delayed)—This is the record of a 10-day 3,000-mile trip out along the Aleutian battlefront to Kiska Island and return.

Essentially it is the record of a personal adventure and is told as such because it was an experience that almost every American who respects his citizenship would give much to have known.

Americans are living and fighting in the Aleutians—and the Aleutians are American soil. They are fighting and dying there to stop an invader threatening their home land, itself.

They lead a brutally hard, cheerless and dangerous life. They have pared living down to its essentials. They sleep and eat—when such necessary luxuries are available—in tents and burrows in the soggy tundra. They fight in airplanes flying in weather that at its mildest would keep any peacetime plane nailed to the ground.

The islands they cling to are desperate and savage.

Started In Cat

We started in a Catalina flying boat, banking steeply to avoid a jutting cliff and levelling off across a 1,000-foot pass so low the scrubby fire trees almost scraped the big boat's hull.

We turned westward and set a course down the peninsula in weather that, for once, was good. Two hours later it began to close in and I saw the sun only once again in nine days.

The wet cold of the islands soon bit into me, an emergency solved by shoving a pile of miscellaneous gear off a bunk and climbing into an eiderdown sleeping bag.

Five hours later the gunner shook me awake and told me to get up because we were ready to land. We were outside Dutch Harbor, he said.

I scrambled back through the plane to the gun blisters and looked out into a gray wet world in which the only distinguishable features were the darker gray waves directly beneath. There was no land, no sky, nothing but fog.

"Who knows it's Dutch harbor?" I yelled.

"The navigator," he grinned. "He's never missed yet."

But we didn't land. We cruised in circles for an hour but the rocky harbor entrance was so choked with fog that we couldn't get in.

Landing Effected

Two hours later under a lowering sky we slipped into a desolate bay and landed. The big boat hit the water with a ripping sound as though one had come down in wet concrete.

This was a dispersal point. The radioman scrambled into the gunboy with a signal lamp and soon a motor lifeboat came buckling through the seas to pick us up.

That night we slept aboard an old destroyer converted to duty as a seaplane tender. And we stayed two days, for next morning the wind had risen to gale force and the ship pitched and strained at anchor even in the harbor.

This tender had serviced the flying boats through the worst of their introductory ordeal early in June when the Japs were in these waters with aircraft carriers, cruisers, transports and subs. Some were still there.

On the second day I went ashore to acquire as vivid a memory as I shall ever have. The boat put me within reaching distance of a six-foot ladder up the cliff and I scrambled up while a fierce wind tore at my borrowed raincoat and threatened to throw me back to the water.

At the top I saw the tundra for the first time, a hummocky morass that looks like land God

Marion Sewer Tunnel Nearly Done

In the photograph above workers are shown installing one of the sections of Marion's new East Side sewer. W. A. McDowell, a foreman for the Hunkin-Conkey Construction Co., who is directing the installation, is shown helping force the heavy pipe in place.

Blasting on East Side Project To Be Finished This Week; Some Big Pipe Already Installed.

Some time between now and Saturday night, if all goes well, the last charge of explosives used to blast Marion's East Side sewer tunnel will be exploded and peace and quiet will be restored over a large neighborhood.

For several weeks, the equivalent of a big Fourth of July celebration has been going on for people living within a six-block radius of the project. Heavy dynamite charges have been exploded at regular intervals to open up the 1,500-foot tunnel that will connect a sewer line at Jefferson and Center streets with the city's main line that now ends on Church street near Forest.

Completion of the blasting is expected to leave about two more weeks for final work on the big project. Yesterday there was about 45 feet of rock yet to be blasted in the tunnels.

Already some 500 feet of the huge 24-inch sewer line buried about 24 feet underground, has been laid in the tunnel. The sewer is of heavy duty vitrified pipe with walls about two inches thick. The heavy sections are lowered down the shafts by a rugged derrick and at the bottom of the shaft each section comes to rest on a metal car that rides on small railroad-type track down the tunnel to the place where it is to be connected with the other sections.

Backfilling in the tunnel, which is roughly five feet square, is being done with a special mixture of limestone screenings which are blown into the tunnel by a pneumatic placing machine. The machine is located at the bottom of a shaft where a hopper feeds screening into it that are lowered from ground level. A pipe runs down the sewer tunnel to the place where men are working. The workers spread some of the screenings on the bottom of the tunnel to establish the proper grade for the sewer, and enough along the sides to hold the pipe sections in place. When several sections have been properly connected, the entire tunnel along the completed section is blown full of the screenings and the workers then install another section.

About 50 men are now working on the job. The work is being done by the Hunkin-Conkey Construction Co., builders of the Scioto Ordnance Plant, under an arrangement with the city that will permit the ordnance plant to use the city sewer system. The sewer is a valuable addition to the city's system, being designed to eliminate a sewer bottleneck that has always flooded a portion of the East Side during heavy rainstorms and left water standing in the streets for hours at a time.

The new sewer is under portions of East Church and East Center street, starting on East Church near Forest and continuing eastward several hundred feet, then going north under an alley to Center street and thence east under Center street to Jefferson street. It is expected that within a short time after the East Side sewer is completed, the ordnance plant line will be ready to put into use.

RENT BOARD SENDS NOTICES TO TWELVE

List of Cases for Monday Hearing Grows.

Twelve notices were sent by registered mail yesterday to parties involved in Marion's rent problems, Carl Haberman, clerk to the Marion county rent control board, said today.

The notices were of a public hearing on complaints which have been filed since the board began operating on Wednesday. The hearing will be Monday night, Aug. 3, at 7:30 p. m. in the Marion county common pleas courtroom in the courthouse.

Also on Monday attorneys and persons in rent cases pending in municipal court have been asked to appear before the board. No definite figure on the number of these cases could be given this morning, but one municipal court official estimated there probably would be 10 cases to be considered.

Mr. Haberman today asked that persons having complaints make them with him at the courtroom during the day. He will accept no complaints by phone, either at home or in the office. He also asked that complainants confine their reports to the specific information sought on the complaint blanks.

Dairy Horse in Marion's First Runaway in Years

The first runaway horse accident on the streets of Marion in recent years was reported to city police yesterday, involving a horse owned by the Moorus & Ross dairy of 142 Olney avenue.

The horse ran away at 1:45 p. m. yesterday while hitched to a dairy wagon, striking a car parked on Olney avenue and owned by Alva Furry. Only minor damage resulted. Wayne Bilger, 37, of Richwood was in the wagon at the time of the accident. He was uninjured.

ALLIED BOMBS RAIN ON JAPS IN NEW GUINEA

Enemy Expands Toehold, Puts Force Ashore at Another Point.

By The Associated Press

GENERAL MACARTHUR'S HEADQUARTERS, AUSTRALIA, July 24—Before the Japanese could settle down in their newly-seized base on the southeast coast of New Guinea, Allied airmen went to work on them yesterday, knocking out the third transport in three days, destroying shore installations and forcing frenzied invasion troops to leap wildly overboard from landing barges.

But despite the heavy cost the enemy went ahead with operations in the Gona Mission-Buna area, where a toehold was gained Wednesday and a military spokesman indicated another small seaborne Japanese force had been put ashore at Ambasi, 30 miles up the Papua peninsula coast from Buna.

Dive-Bombers Used

Allied dive-bombers, used for the first time against land targets in New Guinea, and medium bombers made five separate raids on the Gona Mission-Buna area and a headquarters communique said they started numerous fires.

A 5,000-ton fuel-laden enemy transport was caught squarely amidship and set aflame. Previously two other transports were hit and one of them sunk as the convoy moved down the coast from Japanese-held Salamaua.

Allied fighters in yesterday's attacks skimmed over the whitecaps to spray deadly machinegun bursts into troop-jammed landing barges and the pilots related that panic-stricken soldiers hurled themselves into the water to escape their fire.

Silence Shore Guns

Ashore, the fighters shot up machinegun nests and silenced an anti-aircraft battery. Other fighters pounced on a small enemy ship north of Salamaua, itself 150 miles northwest of Buna.

Gona Mission, where the Japanese set up their first base on the Papuan peninsula, is a small settlement built around an Anglican mission. It was the enemy's first successful penetration southward toward Australia since the occupation of Salamaua and Lae last March.

SUPPLIES FOR ROADS HELD UP

County Awaits U. S. Action on 32 Carloads of Road Topping Material.

Marion county's summer conditioning of 333 miles of county roads has stopped and cannot be resumed until an application to the public roads administration for topping materials is approved.

R. M. Nelson of Columbus, bituminous coordinator for the state of Ohio, yesterday assured County Engineer Walter W. Johnson that the application had cleared the Columbus office and would be forwarded to Washington today.

On July 9 the county engineer was informed by the office of petroleum coordinator for war and State Highway Director H. G. Sours that all re-surfacing applications of asphalt and asphaltic products, tars and tar products must be applied by July 22.

Need 32 Cars

The Marion county office has on order 32 cars of tar topping which had not arrived by Wednesday, deadline for work such as Marion county's 1942 program. Anticipating that the material would not have arrived by July 22, Mr. Johnson immediately made application for the required material. The application was held up until the office could furnish six colored maps to accompany the applications. The applications were necessary, Mr. Nelson explained, to show definitely where the material is to be used.

All work of "priming" the roads for the topping has been completed.

Although the government order stops the county office's road work there is enough work to be done on bridges in the county to keep the office busy for weeks, Mr. Johnson said this morning.

COLUMBUS, O., July 24—Gov. John W. Bricker announced today the appointment of Ralph Stone of Ashtabula as acting director of the Ohio defense council to succeed Courtney Burton of Cleveland, who will become associate director with headquarters in Cleveland.

Stone, commander of the Ohio department of the American Legion last year, will assume his duties at once. During the past year he served as director of the civilian volunteer service within the defense council, at a salary of $5,000 a year.

AIR COURSE PLANNED IN HIGH SCHOOL HERE

Bucyrus and Mt. Gilead List Similar Classes.

Similar courses have been announced by the Bucyrus and Mt. Gilead high schools.

Aim of the course, according to the superintendent, is to give high school students preliminary training that will shorten the specialized training period necessary for entrance into military or commercial aviation.

Plans for the Marion course have been under consideration since May and considerable material on the program has been received by the superintendent. Further action will await the return of the Harding principal, O. H. P. Snyder, who is out of the city at present.

Actual flying of planes is not a part of the program, Mr. Holt said. The course is a ground school course which includes aircraft structure, identification of planes, aerodynamics, meteorology, navigation and instruments and gliders.

Hull Sounds Freedom Call in Address to All Countries

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, July 24—The United States is calling on all peoples who hope to keep their freedom, regain lost freedom or win new freedom to help defeat the Axis now.

Secretary of State Hull sounded the call last night in an address shortwaved to all countries—friends, foes, defeated nations and those still listed as rigidly neutral. He stressed that the conflict now raging is "not a war of nation against nation" but a worldwide fight by those who love freedom against would-be conquerors who seek to enslave all mankind.

Characterizing professions of neutrality in such a conflict as "absurd and suicidal" he pictured the world-wide war as a test of the caliber of nations and individuals.

"There is no surer way," he said, "for men and for nations to show themselves unworthy of liberty than by supine submission and refusal to fight, to render more difficult the task of those who are fighting for the preservation of human freedom—unless it be to align themselves freely and voluntarily with the destroyers of liberty."

Addresses Occupied Nations

Then, in a sentence apparently aimed at the militarily helpless inhabitants of Axis-occupied countries, he added:

"There is no surer way for men and nations to show themselves worthy of liberty than to fight for its preservation, in any way that is open to them . . ."

Hull asserted that in this vast conflict the wholehearted support of Americans is dedicated to those who are:

1. Fighting for the preservation of their freedom.

2. Fighting to regain the freedom of which they have been brutally deprived, or

3. Fighting for the opportunity to achieve freedom.

Without specifically mentioning the acute tension in India over nationalist leaders' insistence on immediate independence, Hull said:

"We have always believed—and we believe today—that all peoples, without distinction of race, color or religion, who are prepared and willing to accept the responsibilities of liberty, are entitled to its enjoyment."

The full measure of American influence, he added significantly, will be used to support attainment of freedom by "peoples who, by their acts, show themselves worthy of it and ready for it."

Those who think the short-cut to freedom lies in cooperation with Hitler or the Japanese warlords, he suggested, "need only look at the firing squads in Poland, Czechoslovakia, Norway, France, Yugoslavia."

Liberty Through Victory

He reiterated:

"There is no chance for liberty for any people anywhere save through the victory of the free peoples . . .

"We shall send all the aid that we can to our gallant allies. And we shall seek out our enemies and attack them at any and every point of the globe . . .

"However long the road, we shall press on to the final victory."

After victory, Hull pointed out, will come the difficult period of transition from war to peace. During this period the United Nations must cooperate to provide quick relief for starving populations, to restore public order and a semblance of normal life in wartorn areas, he asserted.

To prevent a new outbreak of war, "it is plain that some international agency must be created which can—by force if necessary—keep the peace among the nations in the future." Such international cooperative action must include "adjustment of national armaments."

"It is equally clear," Hull added, "that in the process of reestablishing international order, the United Nations must exercise surveillance over aggressor nations until such time as the latter dem-

PART OF RELIEF SETUP CHANGED

Federal Commodities Rules Changed; 684 in Marion County Affected.

Notice of new procedures in methods of certification for and distribution of federal commodities, effective Aug. 1, was received this morning by Frank Burns, Marion county relief director.

The changes, which he termed "drastic" as compared with the present methods, affect old age pensioners, aid for dependent children, city and county relief cases and any other agencies involved in commodities distribution. Records show 684 persons in Marion county have been receiving commodities.

The new procedures were set up by the state department of public welfare in cooperation with the federal government and are subject to federal audit at any time.

"We are most certainly going to follow instructions as set up by the government," Mr. Burns said this morning. "It will be definitely established when these methods are operating that people who get commodities are eligible for them. There has been no difficulty in Marion county but there has been over the nation."

Certification Plan

Surplus commodities consist entirely of food such as flour, beans, corn meal, butter and canned milk. A family must be receiving some type of public assistance to be eligible for this aid.

Distribution of commodities is a federal project and is carried on through the welfare department of each state.

Under the new setup, after Aug. 1, no person will be eligible for commodities unless he or she has been certified according to the procedure established by the state department of public welfare in conjunction with the federal government.

All agencies involved in the commodities program will take full and complete applications, Mr. Burns said, whereas under the present set-up approval of the applicant's request has been left largely a matter of the agency director.

Each agency will take applications for all its own recipients of commodities.

Where the recipients are living in a home other than an assistance home—one in which all occupants are receiving public assistance—the agency will take the application of the recipient. But before the recipient can receive

RUSSIA ADMITS NAZIS REACH GATES OF CITY

Reds Throw More U. S.-Built Bombers Into Air Battle To Stop Advance.

By The Associated Press

Germany proclaimed today that Rostov had been stormed and captured, although not yet mopped up, and Moscow reported that unprecedented numbers of United States-built planes — especially Douglas Boston bombers—had taken to the Caucasus skies to bolster Russia's fight for life.

The Hitler command announced capture of Rostov, capital of the northern Caucasus, on the main railway and pipeline which tap the oil and mineral wealth of the deep Caucasus, and the Russians, while not acknowledging the claim, said the battle had reached the city's gates.

Quickly the Germans followed this up with an announcement that resistance by fresh Russian troops within the Don bend had been broken.

Moscow dispatches said, however, that Red armies had taken a last ditch stand on the lower Don and were developing a flank attack against the east wing of the German lodgement in the Tsimlyansk region, about midway between Rostov and Stalingrad.

The Red air force was still a power in the Caucasian skies, "inflicting continuous blows on enemy formations and communications," as the communique put it.

The Russian stand on the Don indicated a determination to hold the Tikhoretsk-Stalingrad railway, which roughly parallels the course of the lower Don between Rostov and Stalingrad, an air line distance of 250 miles.

Tikhoretsk, south of Rostov, is at the junction of this railway and the north-south line from Rostov into the Caucasus. The Germans at their Tsimlyansk position were about 35 miles from the Stalingrad-Tikhoretsk link.

By German accounts, Rostov had been swiftly doomed. Two days ago the high command announced that its forces stood before Russian-defended brigehead positions—evidently along the Axai river, a tributary of the Don enfolding Rostrov on the north. Yesterday Berlin proclaimed that German and Slovak troops had forced the bridgeheads and reached the outskirts of Rostov.

Russian Reports

Today's Moscow communique said Russian troops through the night had "fought the enemy in the areas of Voronezh and also in the areas of Tsimlyansk, Novocherkassk and Rostov. No changes took place in other sectors of the front."

That was the extent of the official Russian mention of Rostov although the communique described fighting in the Novocherkassk area, about 20 miles northeast of Rostov, near the bend of the Axai river.

"Our men repulsed attacks by numerically superior enemy forces," it said. "In one narrow sector alone the Germans lost 17 tanks and more than 800 men killed."

The German high command used a special communique to proclaim the capture of Rostov—an occasion calling for a minute-long trumpeting and rolling of drums on the German radio, Berlin's standard device to call attention to special victory claims and gain maximum audience.

"Troops of the German army, troops of the SS (Hitler Guard) and Slovak units, supported in splendid manner by the air force, have broken through the entire front at strongly fortified and deeply echeloned positions of the defenses of Rostov and, after hard fighting, have captured the town by storm," said the announcement.

Stalingrad Menaced

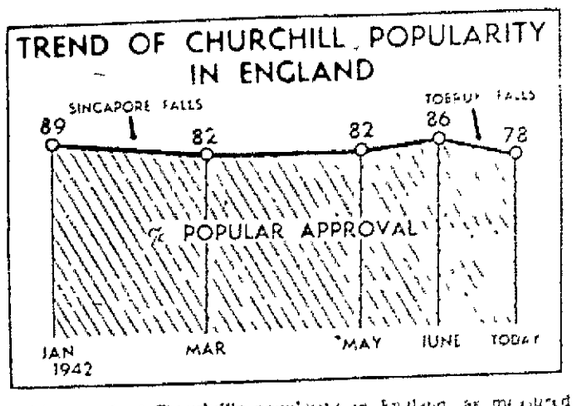
Churchill's Popularity in England Drops To Lowest Point Since Start of War



The trend of Churchill's popularity in England, as measured by polls of the British Institute of Public Opinion, is shown above. Now that the fall of Tobruk brought a greater drop in his popularity than did the fall of Singapore.

By GEORGE GALLUP
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

PRINCETON, N. J., July 24—Since the fall of Tobruk Prime Minister Churchill's popularity with British voters has suffered the sharpest drop of his 28 months in office.

While the people, like the house of commons, still give him a vote of confidence, nevertheless it is by a majority which is a full nine percentage points below that of a month ago.

The public attitude is revealed in returns to date in a British Institutes of Public Opinion poll throughout England.

This poll shows that 78 per cent of all voters questioned approve of Churchill as prime minister today, as compared to 86 per cent in a similar poll before the fall of Tobruk.

That military set-back in North Africa actually caused a greater loss of public confidence in Churchill than did the fall of Singapore earlier in the year.

The British Institute has been keeping a continuous trend line of Churchill's popularity based on monthly polls since July 1940. Up until today his popular percentage had never fallen below 82.

A companion poll conducted in the United States by the American Institute of Public Opinion shows that President Roosevelt's popularity among his fellow countrymen has remained unchanged during the past eight weeks. Seventy-eight per cent approve the way he is handling his job as war president.

MRS. MURDOCK TAKES A CASE

CHAPTER 32

The Chump

WHEN Jack Fenner had finished his inspection of the body he closed the closet door and leaned back against it. His lean face was morose now, and his mouth was a thin hard line.

"It doesn't make sense. From what you say it sounds like a blackmailer set-up, but Nick was no blackmailer."

"Nick?" Joyce said. "You knew him?"

"I knew him."

"But who was he? What did he do?"

"Do?" Fenner made a harsh, throaty sound. "He was a chump. Like me. A private dick."

He went over to the window and looked out. The two women watched him but said nothing. They had told their respective stories, omitting only the part where Della had seen Ward Allen's car that first night, and now Joyce knew that there was nothing more to be said until Fenner asked. She had never seen this side of him before but she had heard her husband speak of things that were borne out by what had just been reflected in his face.

"Nick Hardacker was no blackmailer," he said, "and if he was this was the first time. That's why the lining of his coat was worn out and maybe that's why he's in there now."

His gaze was on them, but he wasn't looking at them. He was looking right through them at something beyond, his upward-slanting eyes narrowed and brooding.

"His gun is still on him. I think he tried to pull it. There's a new rip in that coat lining. He saw he was going to get it. Maybe he didn't have a chance but he tried. And the gun caught in the lining and I guess the slug hit him then and the gun dropped back in the holster."

He blinked and his gaze shifted to Joyce. When he spoke again his voice was level, businesslike. "You're sure it was this guy Raeburn you saw come out?"

"Positive."

Fenner went over to the desk. "He got it sitting in the chair. The guy dragged him to the closet." He pointed with a toe to some marks on the threadbare rug. "His heels made those."

He looked down at the open telephone directory. He picked up the scratch pad Joyce had seen.

"Terrace 9501. That your number?"

"Yes," Della said.

"This is not Nick's writing. He was left-handed. What about the voice you heard? Could you tell if it was his?"

Della hesitated, slowly shook her head. "I'm sorry I thought it was but—I couldn't be sure. I'd only heard him that once."

"It doesn't matter. Either he called before Raeburn came, or while he was here—with Raeburn making him—or he was killed first and Raeburn phoned you. We can tell better maybe when we find out when he died."

Too Many Angles

He came around the desk and stood in the center of the room, his coat open and his thumbs hooked in his vest pockets. "About that envelope," he said, "there are a couple of angles to that, too. Either Raeburn knew you were coming and waited—after he'd lugged Nick in the closet—"

He stopped to look at Della. "Where'd you have the envelope?"

"In this pocket." Della patted it.

"It's probably like I said, but it doesn't have to be. He might not have known about the call. He could have come in afterward, rubbed out Nick, and then later heard you coming and ducked behind the door. With you laid out he'd seen the envelope anyway." swSo—n,L,U' klLwm oakdpsog

He grunted again. "But that doesn't matter either now."

"What should we do?" Della asked.

"What can you do? Up to now you've been fooling around trying not to burn your fingers, but this is different. It is for me anyway. Now I'm in it, and I don't like to fool around with guys like Bacon when it's murder. It's like this."

He took off his hat and put it on again.

"If you're right about that cigaret case and you probably are—Bacon's going to hook you up with that first job. Technically both of you are liable to arrest. Not for this thing, but for holding out on the first one. You give him the run-around on this and later he finds out you knew things, he's going to get sore. He'll make it plenty tough. If you get him up here now and he thinks you're coming clean and trying to help he'll forget about the other..... Oh, he'll be sore at first, but if he thinks you're on the level he won't bear down too much."

He stepped to the desk and picked up the telephone. "And you can't blame him, you know. He's got a job to do and you've actually been trying to make a sap out of him. It's going to be a lot easier to have him on your side." He paused, a wry grin tipping a corner of his mouth. "Okay?"

"Okay," she said.

The Closed Door

It was three o'clock when Kent Murdock let himself in the apartment. The assignment that had taken him from home at eight in the morning had proved to be more than just another explosion aboard ship. The ship had turned out to be a destroyer, and subsequent developments indicated sabotage.

As a result he had been on his feet all day and he was dog-tired in body and disgusted in mind because he had been unable to penetrate adequately the cloak of official secrecy that had been woven about the affair.

Yawning, he got rid of his hat and coat, and stowed his camera and plate case in the closet. He moved through the dimly-lighted living room on tiptoe and was halfway across it before he saw the pajamas and robe on the divan. He stopped and glared down at them, reluctantly accepting their presence as his notification from Joyce that the guest room was for him.

"Company, nuts!" he muttered. "Oh, well."

He picked up the garments, noting that the robe was his old green one, and started for the hall. Snapping off the light, he tip-toed on, stopping at the door of his bedroom.

Very gently he turned the knob and opened it, standing there until his eyes became accustomed to the halflight. When he could see that both beds were occupied he eased the door shut.

Della Stewart, probably. And what did that prove? Was this murder case starting to pile up on her? He groped his way along to the next door and, still wondering if the guest actually was Della, opened it and stepped inside.

He felt for the wall switch and then, before he snapped it one, stopped short. The door of the room had been closed. Why?

SEEK SETTLEMENT OF GALION STRIKE

Union Committee Negotiating with Norin Electric Co.

GALION, July 24—P. V. Prosser, chairman of the local union of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, announced late Thursday that a committee representing the local has been negotiating with the management of the North Electric Manufacturing company in an effort to settle the strike of employes which started Thursday morning. He said further statement of the settlement of the difficulties will come from W. H. Wilson of Akron, international organizer for the union Wilson left for Cleveland Thursday afternoon.

It is reported the employes have demanded an hourly wage increase of approximately 15 per cent, plus adjustments in hours and vacations with pay.

The unauthorized strike was called after negotiations between the management and Local B-273, (AFL) were deadlocked in a meeting Wednesday night.

Chief of Police Merle D. Gow said there has been no disturbance during the day at the plant, and that the second shift of workers, called in at 1:45 p. m., made no attempt to cross the scanty picket lines.

The company is one of the most important producers of automatic telephone communications, and it is expected a government representative will investigate the strike immediately. The strike affected only the main plant and Plant No. 2, while plant No. 3 continued to operate. The Mt. Gilead branch was not affected.

HOLDS AND SEALS FOR A Longer-Lasting PAINT JOB

LOWE BROTHERS HIGH STANDARD PRIMER makes the complete painting job last longer because it holds and seals due to controlled penetration. It minimizes the danger of peeling, scaling and cracking. Being practically non-absorbent it affords "tooth" or "grip" for the following coat. It seals all surfaces and is ideal—

FOR BOTH NEW WORK AND REPAINTING

1. It "holds fast" and seals the various surfaces to be painted—both new work and repainting.
2. Controlled penetration defeats absorption and makes a perfect foundation for finish coat.
3. None of the oil in the second coat is absorbed by High Standard Primer.
4. There is no weakening of the oil film.
5. The danger of paint failure is minimized.

TRANSFERS STUDIED BY COUNTY BOARD

Five Families Shifted from Lawrence to Claridon.

The transfer of school districts was discussed and discussed at a meeting of the county board of education last night.

County Supt. D. T. Mills announced that a petition of part of the Lawrence school district to transfer to Grand Prairie had been granted and had become effective on June 5.

A delegation from Bellaire Gardens addition which was not included in the original petition of persons attending Linn school, presented their own petition for transfer and the board took proper action to send those children to Morral. Final action will be taken after a written petition is filed with the board by the residents affected.

It was also announced that the transfer of Smeltzer school district to Pleasant township which had been acted upon by the board at a previous meeting, had become effective July 13.

In addition it was voted to transfer five families from Lawrence school to the Claridon school district. Children from these families had attended Claridon as tuition students last year and petitioned for transfer.

OLD AIRPORT RD. BRIDGE BUCKLED

Structure Near Hangar Now Being Rebuilt.

The Airport road has been closed to traffic until a bridge which buckled Wednesday can be repaired.

The bridge, located about 500 feet east of the airport hangar, possibly will be repaired by next Tuesday, the county engineer's office reported today.

It buckled just as a heavy truck had passed over it. The truck continued on its way.

Traffic has been detoured over Route 30-S to County Road 95-C, at Ellie's place.

County Engineer Walter W. Johnson said this morning that the bridge was an old structure, built to carry 10 tons, and that for some time it had been under the strain of carrying semi-trailer trucks hauling sand. The truck loads of 12 tons, together with the truck weight, averages about 20 tons, double the weight of the bridge load.

Courthouse Improvements

AFTER considerable clamor on the part of the public the county commissioners have taken official notice of several unsightly aspects in the appearance of the courthouse.

The board announced yesterday it had a plan to answer protests of citizens who objected to (a) birds roosting in the sycamores, (b) the unsatisfactory condition of the men's comfort station, and (c) the general shoddy appearance of the building's surroundings.

For their decision the commissioners are to be commended. They appear to have devised a plan that will appease all critics—even those who proposed removal of the trees to eliminate the bird nuisance as well as those who favored keeping the trees regardless of the birds. Under the board's plan the trees appear to be safe, but they will be pruned to offer less desirable lodging for the sparrows and starlings that flock to their sheltering branches in late summer and fall.

The flagstone esplanade, from which itinerant peddlers have hawked their wares for many years and from which budding orators have propounded a thousand theories, is to be removed. The flagstones, the commissioners say, will be taken up and the plot put in grass and planted in shrubbery.

To match the neatness of the lawn the commissioners are considering removal of the old stone steps on the south and west sides of the building and the erection of new and more modern steps. This undoubtedly will improve the appearance of the building, but will create a knotty problem for the Public Forum of the Courthouse Steps, whose members, like the birds, find the courthouse square a favorite roosting place. But the passing of the PFCS may be a blessing if it eliminates the tobacco cuds from around the sycamores.

Lastly the commissioners propose to move the comfort station to the ground floor of the courthouse. This should be an improvement, but their statement that two years may be required to complete the program indicates they expect some difficulty with priorities on plumbing materials. If this is the case, then the delay must be countenanced. But in the meantime there are no priorities on scrub buckets, soap or antiseptics.

An Appeal to Mr. Wallace

THE appeal by Walter J. Damrosch, America's best known conductor and composer, to Vice President Wallace to intervene in the latest Petrillo incident is an event of some importance. Mr. Damrosch, it will be noted, suggests that Mr. Wallace, as a man noted for liberal views, should be interested in preventing what is described as "abuse of power."

The latest Petrillo incident grew out of the attempt to force the hiring of musicians by making it difficult for users of music to obtain records. When James C. Petrillo, president of the American Federation of Musicians, ordered National Broadcasting Co. to cancel a broadcast by high school age musicians from National Music Camp at Interlochen, Mich., Mr. Damrosch and a lot of other Americans lost their patience.

That is another story. Of more immediate importance and concern is the assumption of Mr. Damrosch that the issue between Mr. Petrillo as czar of American musicians and the purveyors and consumers of music in the United States lies between liberals and reactionaries. The case has been argued a long time, but only a few years ago in the United States anyone daring to suggest that union labor's various projects in monopolistic control weren't the very essence of liberalism would have been—well boycotted.

Pitfalls

MORE than one patriot this summer has persuaded his family that it would be fun to spend a vacation at home for a change. The family car and its precious tires would be conserved. The saving in money could be invested in War Savings.

Herewith is a report, typical of what probably is happening to a great many of the summer's crop of home vacationers:

"It started out fine, see? Then my wife had the idea of going to see her people for a day or two. So we drove over. We decided to leave the kids there and spend a couple days with some friends at Midville. Nice folks. When we got home, what with going here and going there and one thing and another the car had 900 miles on it by the end of the vacation. Most years when we've gone someplace it didn't take more than maybe 1,200."

Office of defense transportation, incidentally, has no objection to vacationers going places in their cars if they stick to short trips, refrain from aimless wandering, drive at low speeds and remember that there's a war going on. It seems to have anticipated what many vacationers are finding out for themselves. No matter how good their intentions may be, where there's a gasoline station there's a way.

INCONTROVERTIBLE REASONING.

We like antique furniture, but don't trust it. If it were comfortable, it would have worn out in its own time.—Detroit News.

News Behind the News

By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, July 24—If promises were tires, the nation would ride, but, as it is, the rubber problem is sinking deeper and deeper into the mire of business competition and politics.

No one seems able or willing to take hold of various difficult phases of the problem and hammer out a satisfactory policy.

To cite a typical example, the five big rubber manufacturers trooped into town with an exhibit of rubber processes, designed to show that 60 per cent of civilian needs and all military requirements could be satisfied without much trouble. The exhibit was set up in a hotel parlor and government officials were invited in to see it a week before it was opened.

Before most officials got around to it, they read some advanced stories in one local newspaper suggesting that this exhibit would solve all national problems of tires and gas rationing. That happened to be a little more than the industry claimed, and it made the government officials angry and critical in advance.

Few even went to the show until the arrangers for the industry made it clear they were not responsible for the publicity. WPB Director Donald Nelson then came in, made a few notes and went on his way.

The oil industry stole a march of five days on the rubber manufacturers, when W. S. Farish, president of Standard Oil of New Jersey, announced his company will produce 200,000 tons of synthetic rubber by the end of next year.

Beats Rivals

However, Franklin Waltman, former publicity director of the Republican National committee, succeeded in anticipating Mr. Farish by assembling a large press conference here a week earlier to promote interest in the Houdry process of one of his new clients, which apparently is backed by competitors of Mr. Farish, namely, the Sun Oil Co. and the Standards of New York and California.

So it goes in an active competitive business battle to produce synthetic tires for the nation, while government officials look on skeptically. They naturally want to justify their policy, continuing rationing.

They find numerous faults with the various proposals, contending for instance that there is nothing "new" in the rubber show, that the other porcesses will not produce good tires or will need too much steel for plant construction, or cannot produce in time, etc.

Meanwhile, Mr. Donald Nelson has thrown the powerful weight of his position against the Gillette bill in congress proposing to create a single rubber authority, not Mr. Nelson, and to manufacture more rubber from alcohol than Mr. Nelson wants. He practically told congress that if he had it to do over again, he might allow more synthetic production from alcohol but that the change now would upset his calculations.

As a result of this, or other congressional dissatisfaction with Mr. Nelson's failure in this one line of production, the capitol cloakrooms are filled with rumors that he may stay in London on his forthcoming trip, or that he will otherwise be retired. (Not confirmed by any executive authority).

Dead End Street

Thus all avenues of activity seem to lead into the same dead-end street upon which the rubber problem has been running from the beginning. No one not even Mr. Roosevelt, seems to have been entirely without fault.

In circulation in congressional quarters is a clipping from the New York Times of Feb. 26, 1941 containing the following account of a presidential press conference of the previous day:

"The President expressed his belief that the United States was in no danger of running short of rubber, much of which comes from the Netherlands Indies. Much raw rubber has been bought by this country and there is a good sized supply on hand he said. If a 'pick-up' campaign becomes necessary, enough rubber could be obtained from old tires and used rubber to keep going until synthetic rubber plants could be put up."

The failure of the government under its managed war economy to provide either sufficient tires for eastern gasoline for necessary civilian work—while succeeding in all other production lines—is practically the exclusive subject of civilian conversation in the east where the stricter gas rationing (4 gallons a week) went into effect Wednesday.

Today it is generally believed here that this project has been shelved definitely until after the elections. Thus, the political concussion is being confined to the east for the present at least.

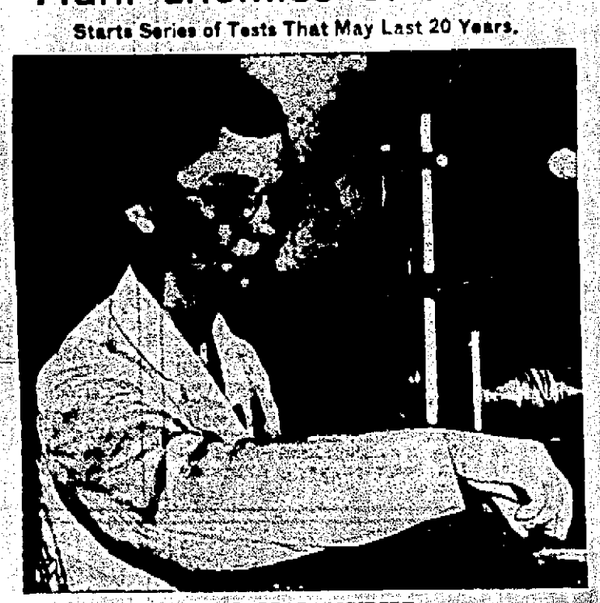
Hunt Enemies of Health

Starts Series of Tests That May Last 20 Years.



DR. BARBARA SEIBERT

WIDE WORLD FEATURES

PHILADELPHIA, July 24—In a crowded tenement section of Independence Square, a famed woman scientist is undertaking a series of experiments that may last 20 years—and produce nothing.

The scientist is modest, diminutive Dr. Florence Barbara Seibert, biochemist of the University of Pennsylvania's Henry Phipps Institute.

Dr. Seibert already is credited with developing a pure tuberculin. That achievement for which she recently was awarded the American Chemical Society's Francis P. Garvan gold medal, made possible accurate and reliable skin tests to determine whether tuberculosis exists or has existed. She is my recommendation for the woman of the month.

Her new research effort has just started.

"It's impossible to say when or where it will end," she said. "It may be fruitless. But I hope that after a time it may point in a definite direction, possibly toward the development of a preventive."

Dr. Seibert has a desk and laboratory in Phipps Institute, situated in a congested tenement neighborhood where it can work best in "the study, treatment and prevention of tuberculosis."

While ragged children play in the streets outside, she works the hours of an Edison, and then continues paper work when she reaches her home.

A slight woman, crippled by a childhood attack of infantile paralysis she often calls on assistants to work the heavy levers of her giant research machinery.

She attended Goucher college at Baltimore, served as a chemist in a paper factory during the first World war, then finished work for a Ph.D. at Yale. She taught four years at Sprague Memorial Institute, Chicago, before coming here in 1932.

The University of Chicago awarded her the Ricketts prize in 1924 and, in 1938, she received the Trudeau gold medal from the National Tuberculosis association, which supports her work with money derived from Christmas Seal sales.

All Fighting for Better World

By Avery Craven.

Dr. Craven, professor of American history at University of Chicago, presented this article as part of a paper on "American Traditions and the Present Crisis" read before the luncheon of the Friends of Libraries at the American Library association conference in Milwaukee late last month.

NOT until very recently have we begun to see that liberty and equality—the two ingredients in our democratic doctrine—are bitter enemies that once away from frontier conditions, they tend to destroy each other. If men are free they will not long remain equal. If they are kept equal to any degree it will be at the expense of their freedom. Now for the first time we have begun to face the delicate problem of keeping some kind of a balance between the two.

The thing the Russians are talking about, the thing which interests the Chinese and the people of India is not the old traditional American type of democracy. It is a social thing which has to do with self-determination and economic abundance for all peoples, all races, all classes. It is so thoroughly social that it questions the validity of the acquisitive drive of selfish economic interests, and even sometimes, of the capitalistic system itself. It demands to know whether democracy has and will give greater social justice to all men, the weak as well as the strong. It insists that the social order exists for something besides individual gain, that it prove it can overcome greed in human society, that it can put integrity back into civilization.

It forces upon us a tremendous intellectual readjustment which will wrench us sharply from our past attitudes, and drive us to new outlooks on society both at home and in the wider world. It must begin with an honest, clean-cut realization of why we are at war, what our group of nations is actually fighting for, and what price we must pay for a permanent peace. This cannot be done by a glib recital of platitudes as so many are trying to do. It is a harsh and nasty business from which even the bravest might shrink. But it has to be attempted.

WE are not at war just because Japan attacked us at Pearl Harbor, just because Hitler invaded Poland! We are at war because our civilization as a whole has broken down for lack of sound and virile quality. There is a reason as well, and it lies in the failure of our systems and our purposes to do justice and live with sincerity among men. The German people and the Japanese people may be somewhat more warlike in their tempers than the rest of us but back of their mad drives lie the deep longings of human beings for better conditions. They may be mistaken in how to get these things but the urge to secure satisfactory national development was most certainly the starting point in their courses. Our civilization has become a mad struggle for things. The basic use of nationalism has been to monopolize earth's riches for favored groups. Great areas for economic exploitation have been carved out and monopolized, tariff barriers have been set up, native people have been plundered to enrich the few at home. Nations that should have united for mutual advantages have been played off against each other by their more powerful neighbors and rendered helpless. England has done that continually on the continent of Europe. China has been a happy hunting ground for other powers and the conduct of no nation there could possibly inspire the confidence of other nations. The dominant characterisitic of classes within the nations has generally been one of selfish disregard of larger social interests. Advantage by any method has become the accepted rule. Few nations have been willing to observe the rules and agreements set up by international effort when their own ends could be better served by disregarding them. As few citizens have held the laws of their countries sacred above self-interest, man has thereby lost his faith in the integrity of his fellowman. Greed has become more powerful than ideals. The value of a good society based on human justice and well-being does not appeal with equal force to the chance for personal gain. We have forgotten that men must live nobly if they are to survive in this modern world.

OUR first job is to fight this war with purpose, to make certain that the things we are after are the enduring things. Then the peace will take care of itself. We can, perhaps, win a war, waged just to protect ourselves and to defeat Hitler. But if we do and leave the causes which produced this war untouched, we will live only to fight again in another generation. We

From News of Other Years

TEN YEARS AGO

It was Sunday, July 24, 1932.

The Welsh Imperial Singers opened the Marion Chatauqua season at Garfield park in a program that was preceded by city-wide church vesper services. A crowd of 1,000 persons attended the vesper meeting and heard Fred L. Rosemund of Columbus speak on "The Causes of the Depression." A community choir led by William L. Dowler and a civic orchestra conducted by Bert D. Myers furnished the musical numbers.

Alberto Santos-Dumont, known in South America as the father of aviation, and contemporary of the Wright Bros. in the early experiments of the 1890's, died at Sao Paulo, Brazil.

Mr. and Mrs. David Norris and Miss Maude Norris returned to their home in Coshocton after spending a week with Mr. and Mrs. Norris' daughters, Mrs. Elizabeth Fisher of East Church street and Mrs. L. V. Ketner of Elm street.

The Upper Sandusky Indians scored a 12-2 victory over the Marion Merchants Greys at Upper Sandusky. The batteries were: Adams, West and Jones for Marion; Passett, Moses and Bowen for Upper Sandusky.

TWENTY YEARS AGO

It was Monday, July 24, 1922.

Firm federal action to cope with the twin rail and coal strikes was reported taking place in Washington. The government was expected to have the inter-state commerce commission, with the cooperation of other government departments, exercise a virtual dictatorship over allocation of coal and coal-carrying transportation for the duration of the industrial emergency.

A news dispatch from Berlin predicted the crumbling of present international alliances and the formation of new agreements among the nations involved in the war. One of the developments forecast was a Russo-German alliance.

Mr. and Mrs. George T. Emerson of West Center street received a cable from from their son, George Jr., who had been in London for several years, stating he would sail for home on Aug. 15.

After hearing a delegation of 18 persons who favored introducing a course in vocational salesmanship at the high school the Marion school board passed a motion that the proposal be dropped unless the state director of vocational training dealt directly with the board. Earl T. Smart, clerk of the board, said the state director had taken up the matter "with every one in Marion excepting the board."

Mrs. O. P. Shoots entertained the Kensington club at a birthday party in honor of her daughter, Miss Marguerite Shoots at her home five miles north of the city.

"Nothing came up. Do you suppose I planted the seeds upside down?"

McGraw Tried It

Landis Ruling on Big Leagues Having No Law About Negroes Recalls Incident of the Past.

By DAMON RUNYON

JUDGE LANDIS' statement that Negroes are not barred from playing in the big leagues and that a manager can sign a player of that race any time he likes reminds me that John J. McGraw once remarked years ago that if he ever found a Negro he thought would make his team he would not hesitate to grab him.

As a matter of fact, McGraw did experiment briefly with a player who was undoubtedly of Negro blood, though in deference to the unwritten law against Negroes that prevailed then in the big leagues and has since prevailed, no matter what the high-muckymucks say now, McGraw put the fellow away as a Latin, despite a slightly Uncle Remus accent.

This was a long time back when McGraw was managing the Baltimore club in the National league. The player was an infielder and was with the club some time. His racial origin was no particular secret to the other members of the club. It happened that he was not up to big league standard in playing ability and McGraw finally let him go. Presumably he never afterward found a Negro he thought worth a trial.

I THINK there can be no doubt that there have been a number of players in the big leagues in other years, who would not have stuck there long had close scrutiny of ancestry been deemed a requirement for admission to the baseball elect. A great pitcher of another generation was believed by his fellows to be of Negro blood but no point was ever made of the matter.

When it came to baseball, I reckon my old home town of Pueblo, Colo., was about the most democratic municipality in the land. It was democratic in every other way, too, as Charlie Carlile of the First National bank there recalls to me in a recent letter.

John Thatcher, then one of the owners of the bank, which is still in the Thatcher family, used to sit on the doorstep of his hardware store holding court with the cow hands from out on the ranges while more aristocratic acquaintances waited in the background.

But our baseball club was the greatest symbol of our democracy. Two hometown Negroes were stellar members. They were the Dean boys, Bill and Zack. The former was a catcher and the latter played shortstop. They were corking ball players, too. Now that I reflect on their prowess, I think they could have made the big leagues without much difficulty.

Do not get me idea they stood out because of the caliber of their company either. The second baseman on our team, which was called the Pueblo Ponies and was a member of the state league, was Jimmy Williams, afterward one of the greatest stars in the big league. He was with the New York Yankees when the American league invaded the big town.

THERE was a left-handed pitcher on our team named Bert Jones. As "Lefty" Jones he became a top-notcher with the St. Louis Browns or maybe it was the Cardinals. Anyway, he was in St. Louis a long time. We sent other big leaguers out of Pueblo, Willie Hogg, of the Yankees, Bob McGraw and several others, but they came after the era of the Dean boys. I believe the Deans lasted long enough to play a spell for Pueblo in one of the many different versions of the Western league that sprung up in that territory through the years.

I have seen a lot of Negro baseball clubs in my time and some of them were pretty good. One of the Negro regiments of the old regular army used to have a crack team but it was not all-Negro, as the catcher was a white captain, a West Pointer, whose name escapes me for memory. Folks sometimes wondered if it made for military discipline to hear a baseline coach bawl when the captain was trying to out-fox a hit, "Run you son of a gun, run."

Rover Leaps for Battle

By JACK STINNETT

WASHINGTON—The Army has finally decided to unleash the dogs of war.

In this instance, we are once more several months or years behind the Nazis, who reportedly now are using more than 100,000 dogs for supplementary sentry service and other duties connected with prosecution of the war.

Now comes the quartermaster corps to give full recognition to Dogs for Defense, Inc., an organization of owners, breeders, trainers and handlers, backed by some of the biggest kennel associations in the country.

The idea is to supply the army and navy with thousands of dogs (about 2,000 have been supplied to date), trained to contribute a sensitive nose, an extra pair of eyes and ears, and canine sixth sense on sentry duty.

If Rover is a pure-bred dog (and he can be a she) between one and five years old, is sound of wind and limb, he's eligible for military duty. There are, of course, a lot of additional IFs.

He (or she) must be of watchdog disposition. That is, the army doesn't want any strange sniffers—they have to be barkers or, at least, growlers. He mustn't be a one-man dog either, because the canine sentries might have a new master every time he's on duty. He must be able to work as well at night as in the daytime.

And what is of vital importance, he must be able to work as well under gunfire as any of the best field trial blue ribbon winners.

Having answered all those specifications, the dog must also answer to the following commands (preceded by his name):

"Stay"—which means "as is" and immediately.

"Come"—or get for papa, Bruno, and chase any rabbits on the way.

If the family purp fulfills all these requirements and is that far along in his training he's ready for military service and the specified agents of Dogs for Defense (they are in the process of being appointed in practically every city and town in the country—ask your veterinary or local kennel club) will put him through the paces.

This drive for dogs to use in modern mechanized warfare has its funny side, too. It is reminiscent of the story that Rommel, the German genius of desert warfare, learned every basic principle of strategy he knows from studying the campaigns and attack strategy of "Stonewall" Jackson.

When the founding fathers and the pioneers were setting off their blunderbusses against the Indians, the worst menace they had to contend with in front was the warning powls of the dogs in the Indian camps and villages.

About 200 million cubic feet of helium have been produced since its discovery, more than nine-tenths of it in the United States.

NAMED FIRE ADVISER

By The Associated Press

CLEVELAND, July 24—Battalion Chief Frank P. McNea, who has spent 23 years in the Cleveland fire department, has been named senior fire protection adviser to the regional office of civilian defense, Dan T. Moore, regional director, announced. McNea was given a year's leave of absence and sent to Washington to represent the region at a conference of fire proteception advisers.

Charlie Spivak's Band Booked at Cedar Point

Continuing the policy of bringing the nation's topflight dance orchestras to the ballroom each week, Cedar Point will offer the music of Charlie Spivak and the Stardusters July 31 through August 6. They will go there direct from an engagement at Hotel Pennsylvania in New York City.

While the Spivak band is new in name, the maestro is a veteran of radio, stage and ballroom orchestras. Charlie's trumpet-tooting rated him a much-sought-after musician by such orchestra leaders as Ray Noble and Tommy and Jimmy Dorsey. Once on his own, he set about making a reputation as a band leader as well as a talented musician. Included in the Spivak crew are Garry Stevens, one of the nation's popular vocalists.

WOULD DOCTOR SOIL

By The Associated Press

ST. LOUIS, July 24—Doctoring the soil on which food is grown instead of doctoring patients in hospitals will have the taxpayers money and cost less in the end than socialized medicine, Dr. Jonathan Forman, editor of the Ohio State Medical Journal, told a national meeting of the Friends of the Land here today. Within the next 10 years, he predicted, soil doctoring will be accepted as a necessary health measure.

BETTER WORLD

have tried it once! Whether we like it or not, we as a nation must face and face honestly the fact that our traditional values have been invalidated. An international mindedness must gradually take the place of our old smug national isolationism. We must begin to accept the responsibility for the weak everywhere. We must accept the responsibility for law and order and justice throughout the earth except it not as a dictator, not even as one of a special group who must set the world in order according to our own plans, but accept it as a human obligation where men of all classes and all races work together as we have learned to work together here in America — southerners, New Englanders, westerners, and midwesterners.

We have had too much of the silly notion that all of right and all of justice can be found on one side, whether it be in political issues or regional cultures. The day of responsible international living is at hand. An international civilization is not just a matter of economic and political balances. It has developed into a desperate struggle just to live and let live. It can only be supported by complete integrity, a generous toleration, a rebirth of a wholesome respect for agreements and laws.

There is no substitute for goodwill. Even the most complicated machinery for an international political system will be valueless without these more fundamental things.

RAILROADS IN WARTIME

"Without transportation we could not fight at all," says Joseph Eastman, Director of the Office of Defense Transportation. And in these days there is nothing that enters into war, from troops to bullets, which is not dependent absolutely on transportation."

J. S. Ellis

That positive statement sure drives home to all of us how directly our railroads are in this war. Transporting millions of troops. Hauling the raw materials for tanks, planes, ships, guns. Moving these finished implements of war to ports for shipment to the far corners of the world.

But we all must recognize this is only the beginning—

The peak of war production and the peak of troop movements is still ahead! These titanic jobs must come first!

Much of the vast passenger traffic now carried on the highways will seek railroad service, due to gasoline and rubber restrictions.

There is no material available for new railroad passenger cars. Such material is going into trucks, planes, ships, guns and bombs.

What then must happen? We must tighten our belts again. Every bit of equipment must do more . . . all available passenger cars for civilians must be filled as much as possible.

That's why, for the duration, we may have to give you an upper when you ask for a lower, or a day coach accommodation when you prefer a parlor car.

And that's why it's so important that you plan your trips well in advance, make your reservations well ahead of time.

Freedom of Education!
(One of the Essentials of a Democracy)

Of all of the essentials of a Democracy one of the most important is the right of every boy and girl to an education—untainted and untrammeled.

In the good old U. S. A. no one is denied the advantages of knowledge; the opportunity to explore the wide horizons of the sciences, the arts, the crafts—all the subjects that make for a strong, intelligent citizenship and a fuller life.

Can this freedom work? It has since 1776!

Today, Americans are the most literate people in the world—enjoying the world's highest standard of living, thanks to education, unselfish individual enterprise, the will to work, and full confidence in the fairness of one's neighbor.

That's what America is fighting for. With these incentives we cannot fail.

SENATE COMMITTEE SEES NEW TAX HIGH

Recommendation Would Boost Total to British Level.

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, July 24—Federal taxes approaching $40,000,000,000 yearly was foreseen today by Senate finance committee members should Congress adopt a recommendation of Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau to lift levies eventually to the British level.

Morgenthau told the committee, in urging a $2,500,000,000 boost in the new $6,271000,000 revenue bill approved by the house that he saw no reason why the United States ultimately should not do as well as great Britain and Canada in financing an enlarged portion of war costs, out of taxation.

Britain, he said, expected to pay 53 per cent of its war expenditures by taxation in this fiscal year and committee members said that if the United States reached a similar percentage its tax bill would approach $40,000,000,000 for the expected $77,000,000,000 outlay in the year beginning last July 1.

Treasury experts said the house-approved bill would boost total federal tax revenues for the current fiscal year to $23,271,000,000.

Senator Taft (R-Ohio) told reporters he believed $40,000,000,000 was such a stupendous amount that it could only be reached gradually, if ever. It certainly would require, he said, the imposition of a general sales tax, which Morgenthau again opposed in his appearance before the committee yesterday, or some other such levy.

Aleutians No Summer Resort

If that were true probably it would be surprised at the use his children have made of it. For that bleak, treeless plain under a sky as heavy as a tearful eye, filled with American airplanes, trucks, shacks, tents and American fighting men.

Four-engined B-17 and B-24 heavy bombers, fast P-40 and P-38 fighter-planes and a half dozen huge amphibian Catalinas mounted along a runway.

"Well, it ain't Texas," he admitted. But you get used to it."

We halted alongside a cluster of brown, sod-banked tent and he led me to one. It had no floor and no light. A couple of cots and a heap of muddy gear filled the interior. This was headquarters and home for the squadron adjutant, he said.

In the darkness we stumbled down an incline into the ground, passed through a tough board door and found ourselves in an underground chamber walled with scrap lumber. A typewriter's clack and the nervously abusing spark gap of radio greeted us.

The adjutant, a tired, sandy-haired man clad in a weird assortment of army and navy winter clothing, greeted me, pumped me eagerly about the war in the southern Pacific, arranged my further transportation and sent somebody to find me a bunk for the night.

That night we slept in a tent and by morning another 70-knot wind had the canvas cracking like gunfire while rain slatted through the flaps.

Take Off Again

This day the weather was clear for an hour and we passed Mount Shishaldin's smoking, snow-blanketed spire in bright sunlight. Few have ever seen that awesome peak, for almost always it is wrapped in fog.

We made Dutch Harbor that day after challenging three aircraft enroute. Each time an unidentified speck appeared near us the gunners unstrapped their guns, opened the blisters and waited until the plane was identified. It was not many days since the Japs had appeared here and there was no guarantee they wouldn't come again.

That night there was dinner at a table and there was a bath, a luxury appreciated no less because the water has a quality of turning brick red when heated.

Next day we were off again, heading for the makeshift outpost from which the Kiska bombers jump off. We found that almost a repetition of our first dispersal point—with several important differences.

Our new tents had floors and fires, but the food supply here consisted only of canned sausage, canned cornbeef and canned salmon. It is not difficult to learn to hate salmon.

Surroundings Different

Here was no tundra, but real grass and wild violets as large as half dollars speckled the green with stars. Here, too, a few quanset huts varied the canvas skyline. A quanset hut is an igloo or corrugated iron and if you've been living in a tent under perpetual rain a quanset is palatial.

The mud as always, was knee deep. Whenever the rain stopped for two hours altogether, some alchemy of Alaskan soil and weather converted a good share of mud into a choking dust cloud that floated over the plain.

That night I shared a tent with eight PBY aviators, some who had lived through weather crackups and others who had shot down Jap planes and had been shot down. The oldest was 28, the youngest not more than 20.

Next morning I would fly to Kiska in a B-17 and they were going out on patrol flights that would keep them aloft in the soup for as many as 20 hours.

The trip to Kiska might have been a night mare but was actually a miracle of aerial navigation. The big bomber took off, circled once and ducked under the sea-hugging fog. Four hours thereafter we saw no land, nothing but the fog pressing down and a narrow circle of water racing along below us. We saw no land until we pulled through the soup and found the rocky break of our target rearing through the murk a few miles away.

Saturday night at 7:30 the box car and locomotive will make a tour of downtown Marion, advertising the drive and collecting any records which stores or individuals may have to contribute.

Arrangements for the 40 et 8 participation in the drive were made through William Rizor, chef de gare.

JAP WRITER TELLS OF INVASION HARDSHIPS

Describes Japanese, American Activity in Aleutians.

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK, July 24—The Tokyo radio broadcast a Domei dispatch today in which a Japanese correspondent on Kiska island at the western end of the Aleutians reported that United States bombers were attacking Japanese forces there two or three times a day, dropping bombs through the fog.

The broadcast quoted the correspondent as saying that Japanese forces who have moved into barracks on the island suffered from loneliness and hardships and faced a bitter cold winter which would set in during September.

He reported that since the Japanese landing a month ago the Japanese had changed the name of the island to Narukami, and said roads were being built across the black treeless hills.

Norwegian Plane Hits Nazi Iceland Raider

By The Associated Press

REYKJAVIK, ICELAND, July 24—A German Focke-Wulf, with flames shooting from its engine, disappeared into the clouds after an offshore fight with a Royal Norwegian Airforce plane yesterday afternoon, United States army headquarters said today.

The Norweg in patrol plane, a Northrup, sighted the German 15 miles off the east coast of Iceland, closed to 1,000 yards and opened fire. The Norwegians said they saw their machinegun bursts start a fire. The Norwegian plane was not hit.

This was the second time the Norwegians have engaged German planes in the Iceland area. A few months ago a German bomber escaped into a fog bank off the north coast after being hit.

RAF FORCE ATTACKS GERMAN INDUSTRY

Hit Objectives in Ruhr and Rhineland Section.

By The Associated Press

LONDON, July 24—A strong force of royal air force bombers attacked objectives in western Germany's industrial Ruhr and Rhineland, the air ministry announced today.

Nazi-occupied airdromes in the low countries also were bombed and railways and other targets in invaded territory were attacked in the night by fighters, the ministry said.

It reported that seven British bombers were missing, but two enemy aircraft were destroyed during the continental raids and seven German bombers were shot down during night attacks on Britain described as the heaviest attacks in many weeks.

(The Germans said one of their targets was Bedford, industrial town 40 miles north of London.)

A British airforce commentator said that in all about 40 German planes participated.

State police unromantically said dropping an object from a plane was illegal and recommended to the civil aeronautics authority that Evans be grounded.

London Satisfied with Hull's Speech

By The Associated Press

LONDON, July 24—Secretary Hull's speech calling upon all liberty-loving peoples to help defeat the Axis drew expressions of keen interest and satisfaction from well-informed British circles today.

There was no immediate official comment, but some sources linked Hull's words with Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden's declaration yesterday for post-war British and American cooperation. There was speculation over the implied warnings to neutrals.

"These two speeches are absolutely complementary," said one Briton. "They show that our leaders fortunately are in tune."

Japs Declare Speech Contains Nothing New

By The Associated Press

TOKYO (FROM JAPANESE BROADCASTS), July 24 — The impression created among the people of Japan by U. S. Secretary of State Hull's speech last night is that it contains "hardly an iota of improvement upon what the United States has proposed before, including Woodrow Wilson's league and Frank Kellogg's peace machinery," the Domei agency declared today.

commodities a letter will be sent to the head of the household, notifying him or her that before anyone in the household can receive commodities the household head must go to the agency and give such information as is required. This information, highly confidential, will be kept in a locked file, according to Mr. Burns.

There will be no difficulty handling cases of those persons living in "assistance homes," but there will be considerable confusion for a time in cases involving non-assistance homes, Mr. Burns said. He cited as an instance a home in which an old age pensioner may be boarding. The head of the house must give the required information before the pensioner can receive commodities.

Need Complete Facts

Facts of the case must be known to the old age pension office and, in many instances, to the city or county relief organizations.

Until heads of households in non-assistance homes give the required information and an investigation can be made, no one in the household will receive commodities aid, Mr. Burns said this morning. If the investigation discloses that requirements have not been met no commodities will be distributed.

DEMAND CURB LAWS ON WAR PROFITEERS

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, July 24—Laws to curb the profiteering range of war contractors were demanded today as the result of a year-long investigation by the House naval committee.

In a summation of its inquiry, the committee said 95 per cent of contractors were doing an honest job but "the other five per cent appear to be taking advantage of the war situation."

For that group, the report suggested action to limit profits. It added, however, that "whether this ideal should be achieved through a direct limitation law, excess profits taxes, or some other means should be carefully considered by the proper committees of congress."

The excessive profits of the five per cent group ranged as high as 1,768.22 per cent on individual contracts. This was the black spot in a report which otherwise commended the navy for its "high degree of efficiency" and industry as a whole for doing a "magnificent job."

On the basis of its study of 39,405 naval contracts, with a total value of $4,599,057,085, the committee reported that profits averaged 8.1 per cent of cost, and described that figure as "reasonable." Largest profits in a specific field showed up in engineering and architectural where a survey of contracts of 66 firms disclosed an average profit of 25.97 per cent.

PRODUCTION OF G-M TANKS DISCLOSED

War Dept. Approves Publicity on New Plant.

By The Associated Press

DETROIT, July 24—General Motors Corporation disclosed today with war department approval that the new army tank plant built by its Fisher Body division has been completed and is rolling out the all-welded M-4 type of land dreadnaught in train-load quantities.

Lines of freight cars loaded with tanks wrapped in protective covering now leave the plant on a special track almost daily, the announcement said.

When the United States entered the war, the welded M-4 tank was only in a blueprint stage. In January Fisher received its contract and the first tank was not scheduled to be built until the new plant was completed. But engineers went to work in another factory and the first of the M-4's was turned out in 47 days. By the time the new plant was finished large numbers of the machines were on their way to the battle front.

The M-4's already have been under fire in Egypt where they are known as 'General Lees," the war department said in Washington.

Among the principal developments in the M-4 tank over its predecessors is increased fire power and improved location of the 75mm gun in a revolving turret. It is highly maneuverable and is protected by a tough hide of heavy armor plate.

in prisoners and declared that axis detachments had occupied Siwa oasis, about 30 miles inside western Egypt from the Libyan border and some 100 miles inland from the Mediterranean.

The geography of the position and the fact that Siwa is on a caravan trail leading eastward to the Nile valley suggested the possibility of a strong axis diversion there, away from the El Alamein line, or merely insurance by Marshal Rommel against a deep flanking attack.

The impossible Qattara depression which terminates the El Alamein line 40 miles from the coast, is skirted on the south by the Siwa trail to the Nile.

Italian Claims

The Italians claimed 12 planes downed, three of them Curtisses, and said six were destroyed at Bengasi, Libyan supply port. Six more British planes were downed in air battles at Malta, the Italians added. The British admitted five losses in all operations and claimed six axis planes downed in Africa and two at Malta.

In Britain, where American-British preparations may be under way for diversional relief of Russia, the German air force showed a markedly strengthened hand overnight, sending about 40 planes for scattered raiding. The Germans identified one target as the manufacturing town of Bedford, 40 miles north of London.

The forays, the strongest of many weeks, cost the enemy seven planes while the British were losing a like number in strong night attacks on objectives in Germany's industrial Ruhr and Rhine valleys and on railways, airdromes and other targets in occupied territory. The British added, that two of German's intercepting planes were knocked down.

The RAF's daylight campaign against nearer objectives across the channel in northern France was resumed at dawn.

The German high command identified the RAF's main night target as Duisburg, at the confluence of the Ruhr and Rhine rivers, a target of two nights previous, and said also that Russian bombers made new "ineffective nuisance raids" on east Prussia, losing one plane.

Suggest Something Big Impending in Spy Trial

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, July 24—The trial for their lives of eight alleged Nazi saboteurs entered its fourteenth day today amid an air of expectancy as one prominent participant in the case who declined to be quoted by name suggested that "something big might happen soon.

Members of the prosecution staff were in conference in Attorney General Biddle's office beyond the scheduled 9:30 a. m. meeting time of the military commission of seven generals.

READ THE WANT ADS

Writer Analyzes Secretary Hull's Freedom Speech

By DEWITT MacKENZIE
Wide World War Analyst

Secretary of State Hull's constructive program for a better world after the carnage has ended must be recorded as one of the major developments of the war.

Anomalous though it may seem to talk about peace problems at the moment, this is precisely the time when it may be most beneficial. Mr. Hull's great statement, in which we have a ringing of the spiritual and political, reaches out in four directions.

It is a pillar of fire for the allied peoples as they march for victory. It affords encouragement to the enslaved peoples of the occupied countries. It rebukes neutrals for their "absurd and suicidal" policy. And last, but certainly not least, it may in due course provide the impulse for the populations of enemy countries to abandon their support of a barbaric aggression for which many of them have had little heart.

The soft-spoken gentleman from Tennessee has brought a wealth of humanity to his historic task. He remains the evangelical prophet who for so many years tried to pen Europe that it was headed for war; and he still, so to speak, carries his duelling pistols in his tail pockets, for he has mixed charity with firmness.

There are many facets to this new-world diamond which will blaze so brightly when the light of peace is turned upon it. We are to build for "human freedom and Christian morality." And at long last Mr. Hull may get a chance to see the removal of international trade barriers which he so patiently and persistently has advocated as essential to the economic security of mankind. But perhaps the point which will attract most attention is the provision for an international agency to keep the peace "by force, if necessary" for that represents the teeth in any measure of reform. Without an agency which can compel peace, we shall get a repetition of the tragedy of the marble palace on the shore of Lake Geneva.

Mr. Hull doesn't specify the nature of the agency, but the trend of events leads one to envisage a policing of the world so long as necessary by the big four of the Allies—the United States, Britain, Russia and China. There lies the power which can maintain order while reconstruction is carried out. The time has passed when we can afford to depend on soft language to keep would-be world conquerors like Hitler within the bounds.

Speaking of Hitler reminds us of another duty which the Allies must perform. As Assistant Secretary of State Sumner Welles put it recently, we must mete out swift, inexorable justice to individuals, groups or peoples responsible for the war. The mainspring of all this evil is, of course, the Nazi fuehrer and he, together with his captains, must pay the price.

Still, while we must exact justice there's one thing which we mustn't do if we are to get the new world we want—and that is to approach the peace with hatred in our hearts. The Earl of Selbourne, British minister of economic warfare, last month assured the house of lords that "Britain will never propose a revenge peace." And that clearly also is the underlying thought in Secretary Hull's program.

REPORT RED BOMBING

By The Associated Press

LONDON, July 24—Reuters reported from Stockholm today a Swedish government announcement that bombs dropped by three aircraft on Oeland Island last night were Russian, and that a diplomatic protest had been sent to the Soviet government.

Oeland is off the east coast of Sweden. First reports of the bombing said no damage was caused.

INDICTEE ARRESTED IN SEDITION CASE

Awaits Removal to Washington for Hearing.

NEW YORK, July 24—Colonel Nelson Sanctuary, U. S. Army reserve, one of 28 persons indicted by a federal grand jury on charges of conspiring to break down morale in the armed forces, has been arrested and is awaiting removal to Washington.

A removal hearing probably will be held late today, it was said. U. S. Marshal James H. Mulcahy would give no details, but it was learned Sanctuary was arrested at his Manhattan home.

William Griffin, editor and publisher of the New York Enquirer, and Edward James Smythe, chairman of the executive committee of the protective war veterans association, also named in the Washington indictment, were still being sought.

The indictment charges that the 28 defendants conspired to undermine upon members of the U. S. armed forces that the United Nations were ineffectual, the United States was safe from attack and that confidence in American public officials was misplaced and unwarranted "for the purpose of obstructing, and designed and intended to impede, obstruct and defeat the preparation of our national defense against aggression and invasion and the national war effort."

EMMIT E. EVERETT
Lima, Ohio

I am a candidate for the nomination for Judge of the Court of Appeals of our Third Appellate District at the Primary Election, August 11, 1942, and earnestly solicit the vote and support of each Democrat in the District.

I am a Democrat, experienced trial lawyer and trial Judge, engaged in general practice of law 1906-1930, Common Pleas Judge Allen County 1930-1939, and now Vice-Chairman of Ohio Pardon and Parole Commission.

I believe that an office is a public trust and that an officer should be a public servant.

Lima News Editorial:

"Judge Everett's training, education and experience recommended him for this important post.

"While serving as Judge of the Common Pleas Court the outstanding cases of his career were those of the Dillinger gangsters, which were of national interest."

Indians Snap Yanks Win Streak at 11 Games in 3-2 11-Inning Victory

By The Associated Press

Having discovered a system for beating the New York Yankees, the Cleveland Indians seek new fields to conquer, and already have picked one—the twilight-game double header, which they initiate at the stadium tonight.

The combination which beat the world champions, 3 to 2 in 11 innings yesterday, consisted of pitching by Chubby Dean for nine frames and Joe Heving for two, and a lot of timely hitting after two were out in the ninth.

Tonight's inaugural of evening twin-bills brings Washington here for a game at 6 p. m. and another which will not start before 8:45; regardless of when the first contest ends.

In winning the final of a three-game series here with New York, the Redskins robbed Ernie Bonham of a shutout. Dean permitted the Yanks to score one run in the second on two singles and Phil Rizzuto's double, and another tally in the third on Tommy Henrich's double and Joe DiMaggio's single.

Bonham Gives 6 Hits

DiMaggio singled again in the ninth for the only other safety off the heavy-hitting south hurler.

The Indians, held to six hits and no runs by big Ernie, were two down in the ninth inning when Rizzuto made a low throw on Jim Hegan's bounder. Dean singled to right, sending Hegan to third, and then retired for a pinch runner. Successive singles by Roy Weatherly and Lou Boudreau drove in the two runs which tied the score, and Marv Breuer replaced Bonham. Kenny Keltner fouled to end the inning.

Heving, the ultimate winner, went to the mound for Cleveland and gave up one hit in each of the 10th and 11th frames. Fireman Johnny Murphy, who replaced Breuer, sent the Tribe down in order in the 10th.

Oscar Grimes opened the 11th frame by beating out a grounder to third. Hegan sacrificed and Otto Denning, batting for Heving, singled Grimes home.

Manager of Year

James Luther (Luke) Sewell, the 41-year-old pilot of the St. Louis Browns, is being spoken of these days as the manager of the year.

Probably no manager of a fourth place club ever has been considered for any such recognition before, but it has been a long time since the Browns have been in the first division at this extended stage of the American league pennant race.

The fact that the Browns now not only are in fourth place, but have won 12 of their last 14 contests and are just four games back of the second place Boston Red Sox, is a glowing tribute to the leadership of the soft-spoken University of Alabama alumnus.

The Browns have given up half a dozen players to the armed services, but in spite of this the club has improved due to judicious trading. Instead of selling off stars the club has been able to deal for its own benefit.

Is On Active List

Besides skillful direction, Sewell has made one other recent move of importance to his club. He has put himself on the active list and caught parts of two games in the last week to give the veteran Rick Ferrell a rest while Franz Hayes is ailing.

Sewell worked five innings yesterday while the Browns were about beating the Philadelphia Athletics 5-0. Chet Laabs, who has developed into a star recently, made three hits and Vernon (Junior) Stephens, who has developed into one of the outstanding sportstops in the major leagues in one season under Sewell's guidance, contributed a homer.

The Boston Red Sox halted their losing streak by nosing out the Chicago White Sox 5-4 with two runs built around Dom DiMaggio's triple in the seventh inning after Joe Cronin and Pete Fox had homered in the fourth.

Washington whipped the Detroit Tigers again 5-3 for Alex Carrasquel's third triumph within a week.

In the National league the New York Giants took over undisputed possession of third-place by out-homering the Pittsburgh Pirates 6-4. Johnny Mize notched his 19th round tripper of the year. Vince DiMaggio hit a three-run homer for Pittsburgh.

In the only other contest scheduled, a night affair at Philadelphia, the last-place Phils knocked off the St. Louis Cardinals, 4-3, and put them seven games behind the league - leading Brooklyn Dodgers.

SPLIT AMATEUR MEDALIST HONORS

Johnny Holmstrom, left, of Rockford, Ill., and Johnny Lehman of Chicago discuss their play after finishing qualifying rounds with 36-hole totals of 143 to tie for medalist honors in the All-American amateur golf tournament at Chicago's suburban Tam O'Shanter course. Holmstrom, 21, a University of Illinois graduate, was captain of the school's golf team. Lehman, 35, an insurance salesman, while a Purdue university student won the Big Ten golf title and later, in 1930, became western amateur champion.

On the Local Front

By LOREN W. TIBBALS
Marion Star Sports Editor

MARION, backers of Jack Stephenson, a candidate for the ninth-annual college all-star football game, have turned in between 10,000 and 12,000 votes since the poll began a week ago Monday. Eleventh hour returns are expected to boost the local figure to around 20,000, goal of Marion drive workers. Balloting ends midnight, Sunday.

Received this morning were more than 100 signatures from Isadore Birnbaum, a junior at Ohio State university. Birnbaum writes that the signatures represent about two-thirds of the membership of the Tower club, one of three co-op dormitories located in Ohio stadium. Isadore was a member of the 1939-'40 Harding High school basketball team, runner-up to Columbus Central in the Central district Class A tournament.

As a parting shot he requests your correspondent to thank all-Marion for the whole-hearted support lent him in the close race for all-star honors.

I do.

NEARS 100,000

Polling 17,919 votes since midnight, Wednesday, Jack Stephenson stretched his sixth-place advantage over Darrell Reinhard (California) to 3,661 votes today as the two-week poll passed the three-quarter mark. Al Blozis, gigantic Georgetown star and holder of the world's shot put mark, continued to lead all tackles with 129,118 votes. Paul Lillis (Notre Dame), Alf Bauman (Northwestern), Urban Odson (Minnesota) and Jim Daniell (Ohio State) all have received more than 100,000 votes.

CLEVELAND NEGRO SCORES KAYO OVER SGT. JOE MUSCATO

Ex-Soldier Floored 3 Times as Jimmy Bivins Wins.

By The Associated Press

CLEVELAND, July 24 — Joe Muscato, a slugging preliminary boy who tagged Lem Franklin with a kayo punch, knows a hero's hour may be short.

It was only a month ago when the one-time army sergeant proved Franklin has a glass chin. So Joe was matched with Jimmy Bivins, the Cleveland Negro who also throws heavy leather, and 8,183 people paid their way into Cleveland arena last night to see whether he could take it.

Muscato couldn't. At 186, the 21-year-old Buffalo, N. Y., heavyweight had a ten-pound advantage over Bivins and managed to take two of the first three rounds. Then came the lightning.

Two rights to the stomach and a left to the chin produced a third nine count, and a few seconds later Joe went down for the last time. He climbed up from the floor, but he didn't appear too anxious to beat Referee Joe Sedley's "ten" and he didn't. "I just couldn't get my arms working," Muscato said later.

The night's only consolation for the beaten scrapper was that his brother, Phil, at 160 pounds, reversed a recent knockout loss and took a seven-round decision from Johnny Lawer, 158, of Cleveland.

Other results on the card which produced an $18,514 gate were: Billy Murray, 140, Bellaire, O., decisioned Harry Teaney 139, Cleveland in eight rounds; Charley Hayes, 161, Detroit, beat Harold Dettman, 165, Cleveland in a five-rounder; Bobby Richardson, 147, Cleveland, scored a technical kayo over Billy Seep, 140, Buffalo; and Sammy Derrico, 134, Cleveland, outboxed Fred Burnhard, 131, Akron, in five rounds.

Hunkin - Conkey, Huber Battle to 5 to 5 Tie In 10 - Inning Softball Game

The Hunkin-Conkey Construction Co. No. 2 softballers battled the Huber Manufacturing Co. nine for 10 innings in an Industrial league contest to a 5-5 tie before calling the game because of darkness. Softball commission officials said the game would be replayed at an early date.

When the game was called, the Huber team commanded an 8-7 hitting advantage. One of the Huber hits was Myron Gibson's two-run homer in the sixth inning. Frank Cafagna blasted what appeared to be a four-bagger in the ninth inning for the ordnance workers, but he was ruled out because he failed to touch third base. Ted Anderson, Huber catcher, was the leading plate performer with four hits out of five trips to the plate. This barrage included a triple, double and two singles.

A total of 27 hits were registered in the S. W. O. C. 1949-Osgood game at the Marion Steam Shovel Co. diamond on Uncapher avenue. The former led with 15 hits and won 18-8. As a result of the win S. W. O. C. continued to share the league lead.

Universal Cooler maintained its first place tie in the league standings by trouncing the Holabird & Root team, 6-4, at Presidents field. Bill Everly pitched three-hit ball for the winners, while Ramsey allowed six hits.

In the only other league tilt, General Excavator posted a 6-5 win over the Commercial Steel nine at Lincoln park. Kunkle, winning pitcher, won his own game with a mighty double in the sixth inning, scoring the tying and winning run.

NEW YORK, July 24—(Wide World)—A bunch of the Pirate and Dodger ballplayers, chinning about this and that on the way east early this week, tabbed Tommy Hughes of the Phillies as the National league's No. 1 elbower right now...Proving you never can tell where you'll find gold...The fur-lined skimmer for the best managing job of the season looks like a photo finish between old Luke Sewell and master Melvin Ott...(any arguments?)

Notes To You—Wanna know why Forbes Field is so quiet these days? . . . Bruce McAllister, the fan who's such a strong, silent guy they call him "The Screech Owl," has enlisted in the marines . . . Ring magazine took a nation-wide poll and found out that 68 percent of the fight clubs in the country have shut down or haven't had a show since January . . . New York state sometimes had as high as 28 in the past, but shows only 13 licensed now . . . And only nine of them operating . . . Bert McGrane (Des Moines Register), Wilford (Tiny) Smith (Chicago Tribune) and Clyde McBride (Kansas City Star) have organized a National Football Writers association—First of its kind . . . Did you know Chet Laabs' uncle, Tony Sculzewski, had a tryout with the Cubs 25 years ago and later played with the Milwaukee Brewers? . . . He gave the linotypers a break by traveling under the name of Schultz . . . Ted Mann, the ex-duke tub-thumper, is doing it now for the Jacksonville naval air station.

Clutch Tough—Lew Riggs has only slapped two doubles and a pair of homers and knocked in seven runs for his first ten pinch-hit appearances this year . . . Which hardly comes under the heading of a slump . . and do you suppose Bill Dickey's telling those Yankee pitchers to sorta take it easy on his kid brother? . . . 'Cause Skeets has banged the champ elbowers for a homer, a double and a pair of one-base knocks as a White Sox pinch-hitter this season.

BYRON NELSON AND LAWSON LITTLE TIED IN CHICAGO TOURNEY

By The Associated Press

CHICAGO, July 24—The Tam O'Shanter golf tournament, unlimited, made considerable sense today for a change, because Byron Nelson and Lawson Little, two of the game's great players, were winging along in front of the field in the $15,000 open event with identical scores of 67—five strokes under par—after the first round of the 72-hole contest.

Little, one of the most formidable match players in the world, came in just before dark last night to tie Nelson and establish his candidacy for the first prize of $2,500 that will be handed out Sunday. Things thus were closer to normal at Tam O'Shanter today than would have seemed possible 24 hours ago.

Gib Sellers of Walled Lake, Mich., was right behind the leaders with a 68, while Dick Metz and Clayton Heafner were next at 69. Ben Hogan, the game's consistent money winner, was in threatening position with a 71. The amateurs, after two days of furious battle, had reduced themselves to a quartet—Marvin (Bud) Ward of Spokane, Wash., the national champion; John Holmstrom of Rockford, Ill., Wilford Wehrle of Racine, Wis., and Mike Stolarik, storekeeper third class at the Great Lakes Naval Training station. In the 36-hole semi-final matches today Wehrle met Holstrom and Ward tackled Stolarik.

Two defeated amateurs, Johnny Lehman of Chicago and Pat Abbott of Pasadena, led their compatriots in the open division of the tournament, each having shot a 71 in his first round yesterday. Ward had to go 23 holes to eliminate Earl Stewart, the '41 intercollegiate champion, in their third round match.

Loop-leading Charleston trimmed Zanesville, 8 to 1, second place Erie defeated Springfield, 7 to 4, and Dayton edged Canton 3 to 1, to tighten its hold on third position.

All-Stars Defeat Kansas City, 6-2, in Nocturnal Tilt

By The Associated Press

KANSAS CITY, July 24—The bat of Fred Collins—a weighty willow with slight wear—was the only thing that stood between the Kansas City Blues and a whitewashing last night as the league leaders bowed to the American association all-star baseball team, 6 to 2.

The rangy first baseman slashed a long triple into right center and scampered on home on a wild relay toss for the first Kansas City counter. In the ninth, he teed off on another pitch of George Coffman, the St. Paul righthander, and parked it well over the right field fence to account for the other run.

The all-star squad really sewed up the tilt, the third consecutive all-star loss for Kansas City, in the first inning. They tallied four scores on two timely hits by Joe Bestudik of Indianapolis, and George Lacy of Louisville, and two untimely errors by the Kansas City infield.

Big George Munger of Columbus, Milton Haefner, Minneapolis portsider, and Coffman each pitched three innings with Munger getting deserved credit for the triumphs. He yielded only one safety during his workout, whereas the host club got three hits apiece off Haefner and Coffman.

All proceeds from the game, which was preceded by military demonstrations and presentation of watches to the athletes, went into the army and navy relief funds.

GOAL IN FAT DRIVE IS SET

Committee To Seek 12,000 Pounds a Month! Salvage Price Also Fixed.

A goal of 12,000 pounds of fat a month from the kitchens of homes in Marion [illegible] the drive set by the Fat Salvage Drive now under way, Mrs. James B. Frew, 225 South Greenwood street, chairman of the Fats Salvage committee announced today.

The goal, Mrs. Frew said, the payment of five cents a pound for the salvage is announced at a meeting of the fats committee last night at the home of Mrs. Frew.

While the goal may be high, it can be met the committee believes, with every housewife saving every drop of used cooking fat—bacon grease, meat drippings, frying fat and every kind that is used. The fat will be accepted at meat markets and also at the Whitacre Heat & Fuel Co. at 295 Quarry street.

After the cooking good has been extracted from the fat, pour it through a kitchen strainer into a clean well-smoothed can such as a coffee can and keep in a refrigerator or cool place. When a pound or more has been collected take it to a butcher shop or deliver it to the Whitacre company. It will help, the committee points out, to deliver fats early in the week, instead of Fridays or Saturdays when the butcher is unusually busy.

The WPB estimates each family should save between one and two pounds a month. Two pounds of waste kitchen fats contains enough glycerine to fire five anti-tank gun shells. Glycerine also is used to make signal rockets, recoil mechanisms, demolition charges, steering gears and many other products needed by all branches of the fighting services.

Serving with Mrs. Frew on the committee are Mrs. Ruth Kleinmaier, Miss Edith Trego, Robert Mason, George Alber, C. F. Ferris and Major Joseph Heard.

LAG STILL PREVAILS IN GRAIN MARKET

By The Associated Press

CHICAGO, July 24—With interest in the market at a low ebb, grain futures declined slightly today. Traders said they had seldom seen such small dealings in all pits.

Hedge selling and mill buying were both light. Many traders remained on the sidelines because they believed Congress would be informed Monday whether the new anti-inflation program would require additional legislation.

STOCK MARKET BUYING TIMID

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK, July 24—There is no rush to sell in today's stock market but buyers were too timid to touch off any real recovery blasts.

Dealings, fairly active at the opening, dwindled to a mere trickle later, with the ticker tape halting for lengthy intervals. Scattered plus marks were in evidence but small fractional declines were widespread.

Bullish forces were encouraged by the meagerness of offerings, but brokers admitted that purchasing restraints remained to disturbing Russian war developments, the revival of tax apprehension and the waning of inflation psychology.

Stocks in the rear ranks the greater part of the proceedings included U. S. Steel, Westinghouse, Anaconda, Chrysler, General Motors, Sears Roebuck and Union Carbide. Resistance was displayed by Southern Pacific, American Smelting, Western Union and J. C. Penney.

Merchandising shares had to contend with further signs of a flattening out of the retail spending curve. Dun & Bradstreet estimated this week's dollar volume for the nation as a whole was down 3 to 6 per cent from the comparable 1941 period.

Notice was taken of the federal reserve board summary disclosing the country's department store sales for the week ended July 18 exceeded the corresponding week last year by 5 per cent. The year-to-year increase in the week concluded July 11 was placed at 10 per cent.

STATE GUARD WINS PRAISE

Commander Cites High Intellectual Level of Men in Hocking Camp.

By The Associated Press

CAMP HOCKING, O., July 24—Personnel of the Ohio State Guard has reached an intellectual level never before attained, its commander said today.

It is filled—not in officer personnel but rather in the ranks—with men who have achieved note in their civil endeavor. There are jurists and doctors, legislators and bankers, merchants and attorneys, educators and corporation officials.

Adjt. Gen. Donald F. Pancoast, commandant of the guard and the state naval militia, said that such a personnel reflected the desire of men who, because of age or other reason, could not get into active military service and yet wanted to contribute to the war effort.

Whereas the age of the average man in the former national guard was in the 20's, the state guard average is well in the 30's now. Many men are high in their 40's, some are 50, two are 63 and by statute must be retired at 64.

The men enlisted after the national guard was called into federal service and a new guard was set up to protect Ohio in event of emergency.

"These men didn't ask for officers' jobs," Pancoast said. "They came in as privates, asked for nothing, and are getting nothing but the satisfaction of knowing they are helping."

Judge Arthur W. Doyle of the ninth district court of appeals is a buck private in the company from Akron. Another private is John Bartley, counsel for the Ohio Oil Co. of Findlay. There is Paul Stansbury, professor of psychology at the University of Toledo; John Dickson, superintendent of schools at Westerville, and Irvin Freiberger, a Cleveland insurance executive and son of the president of the Cleveland Trust Co.

Pancoast said that the average man in the guard would have earned $50 had he stayed home this week instead of coming to camp for training. The state pays him about $13 for the week.

Nearly every outfit is at the fullest strength possible under present appropriations. Ohio law permits a maximum guard strength of about 4,800, but the present amounts to only 2,200.

"We have far more offers of enlistment than we can handle," the general said.

Permanent Camp May Be Established

CAMP HOCKING, O., July 24—A permanent camp may be established for the Ohio State guard in Hocking and Vinton counties.

Gov. Bricker, who yesterday reviewed troops training here, said he favored including a guard reservation in a "big conservation development" on sub-marginal land not adapted to agriculture.

The project would "not cost too much," he added.

YOUR HEALTH

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D

National Nutrition

After all that has been said, written and propagandized about the state of the national nutrition, it is a relief to have a book by Dr. Morris Fishbein, "The National Nutrition," which gives us some common-sense facts.

Examination of the men who were rejected under the Selective Service showed that less than a fraction of 1 per cent of them were underweight, but a number of them were rejected because they had evidences in their bodies of dietetic and nutritional errors which occurred when they were young.

Surveys made in 1936 and 1937 showed that ¼ of the families in the United States had diets rated as good, 1-3 were rated as fair and the rest were rated as poor. This does not necessarily mean however, according to Dr. Fishbein, that as a whole the national nutrition is in a very perilous state. He says: "When a Texas county reported," according to Paul V. McNutt, Federal Security Administrator, that 'malnutrition has been a contributing cause in approximately 60 per cent of the deaths in this county for the past five years,' it was reporting a generalization and not an established fact.

"No doubt," he continues, "all of us have some malnutrition. I doubt that anyone subsists long on a perfect diet. The human being is not constituted to live on a perfect diet. His mind makes him partake of innumerable follies in the selection of food. He is cursed with appetites. There are fat people who are malnourished."

What all of this does mean is that we must continue to take care of the national nutrition in a common sense way. I believe that irrespective of the stimulus of wartime, the improvement in our national nutrition in the last 20 years has been more remarkable than that exhibited by any peoples who have lived.

We need foods that contain energy and those are either starch or fat foods, foods that contain vitamins and minerals and this includes milk, eggs, vegetables, cheese and cereals, and we need meat to furnish us material that is not present in any other food.

There is probably more prejudice against the use of meat than any other single article of food. This may be a throw-back from a very early state of man. Ethnologists suggest that man at first lived on a vegetable diet because he could obtain it easily. Meat was on the hoof and in motion. As soon as he began to try to get meat he came into competition with carnivorous animals. According to Furnas, primitive man obtained his first meat by following sick or crippled animals until they were no longer able to fight.

Charles Lamb, who did not pose as an ethnologist, had somewhat the same theory about man's first acquaintance with roast pork.

According to an eminent nutritional expert, the following is a weekly grocery order for a family of three or four, including the essentials that the family must have to remain healthy:

Milk, 10 to 14 quarts; eggs, 6; bread, 14 to 18 loaves; rice, macaroni and other cereals, 3 to 8 pounds; potatoes 15 to 20 pounds; beans and peas 1 or 2 pounds; other vegetables 4 to 7 pounds; fruit 3 pounds; tomatoes (canned) 2 to 3 pounds; fresh fruit prunes dried fruits, occasionally; meat, fish and cheese, 1 to 5 pounds; butter, lard and oleomargarine, 2 pounds; sugar, sweets, seasoning and cocoa, 3 pounds.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

M. M.:—About six years ago I had an attack of hives which was brought on by such foods as orange juice, eggs, asparagus, etc. A diet of starches eliminated this entirely until just recently when it has started again accompanied by severe attacks of hay fever. Could the two be associated in any way?

Answer: Yes. Hives are caused by a very large number of substances. There are more things that cause hives than any other allergic condition. They can be caused by plants, and since you have hay fever at the same time, it is possible that both the hives and the hay fever are caused by exposure to some plant.

Pitfalls of Love

By ADELE GARRISON

"RUTH HAYES is a fiend," I said, echoing Katharine's words, "and from what Jack told me we believe her to be a spy also, working with the gang now trying to find him.

"She was in the hotel only a few minutes ago, trying to learn Jack's whereabouts from me, and she taunted me with your search of the hospitals.

"But," I went on quickly, forestalling any interruption, "she got no satisfaction of course, and my father is having her trailed.

"And now, dear girl, I have already given you the high lights, but it is due you to know everything about this, and I want you to believe that only my father's express command, invoking my military obedience, and the solemn promise Jack exacted from me, have kept me from telling you before. But today the appearance of Ruth Hayes was the last straw, and I begged my father to let me tell you all about it."

I began with Stephen Redfield's inquiry concerning Jack's whereabouts, then went on to the cryptogram sheets Mary abstracted from Redfield's papers scattered in the restaurant by a gust of wind, in which I had recognized Jack's handwriting.

Then I told of my journey to Professor Diswell's home in the Connecticut mountains, of my finding Jack there and my conversation with him, and of bringing back to the hideaway the captured gangsters.

Omits One Detail

Only one thing did I omit. I made no mention of the ivory watch charm I had discovered—my first real clue to Jack's identity. If Jack should ever show her that watch charm again, I did not wish her to know I had seen it.

Finally I told her every detail of the visit of Ruth Hayes, then sat silent, waiting for her questions.

The color that came back to her face as I talked was the only sign that I was cheering her in the least. But when I finished my description of Ruth Hayes being ushered out by my father, she took her hand from her eyes, revealing that they were bright and keenly shrewd again.

Wants To Help Jack

"I haven't a question to ask you," she said, stressing the pronoun. "I can see that you have told me everything you know, and you cannot know what infinite relief it gives me to know of Jack's safety, and what explains the mystery of hi smehavior.

"It—hasn't been exactly pleasant," she went on, "to believe my husband a cruel coward and a weakling."

"I know, dear girl," I ventured, and again she smiled.

"You never fail to understand," she said. "But now I want to see your father. Of course my search of the hospitals is ended, but there may be work he can give me to do. I—I don't want to go back to the farm, Madge, much as I love your children, if there is anything I can do here to help Jack."

The Stars Say—

For Saturday, July 25

JUDGING BY the lunar transits this should be a lively and enterprising day, with many affairs moving under high pressure and initiative. New projects should be successfully launched, but with precaution and an alertness to deception, treachery or subtle doings. This may particularly affect the private life.

Those whose birthday it is may encounter a year of some anxiety despite some important and swift-moving event. This may be a new project. However, the private life in its domestic, affectional or social relations may be menaced particularly by a woman's jealousy.

A child born on this day should have much constructive ability, with enterprise, initiative, force and courage, but may be subject to jealousy and trickery.
